FRENCH WAR DEBT STORY OFFICIALLY DENIED

NO CONCRETE PROPOSALS YET MADE

WASHINGTON POSITION DEFINED

EDUCATING PUBLIC TO CONCESSIONS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1891. Received, May 8, 8.28 a.m.)

WASHINGTON, May 7.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THE INFORMATION COMING FROM A USUALLY WELL-INFORMED SOURCE, THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL NOT TRANSMIT ANY WAR DEBT MESSAGE TO CONGRESS IN THE NEAR FUTURE, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Times,

If Mr. Roosevelt finally decided to send a Message, it will be after the completion of the Administration's pending domestic programme, the report adds.

Most of the President's close advisers believe that he will seek special powers for dealing with the debt question before the adjournment of the special session of Congress, but he thinks that it is necessary, in the meantime, to educate the public to the necessity for making concessions.

Meanwhile, no official criticism has been made of the statement by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in his broadcast statement on Friday night, to the effect that "As we are both pledged to make the World Economic Conference a success, this agreement means that we are to use every means in our power to find a way to settle those debts.

The settlement of the debts issue should come before or during the world Economic Conference, the opinion being held both in Washington and London that upon the war debts settlement depends the success of the Conference.—Reuter.

CONTROL OF ARMS MANUFACTURE

SIR ERIC DRUMMOND'S PROPOSAL

Geneva, May 7.

Sir Eric Drummond has prepared a memorandum drawing an anology between the limitation and control of opium production and the limitation and control of the manufacture of armaments.

In it he suggests that the Opium Convention of 1931 is easily adaptable to the manufacture of armaments, apart from political considerations. —Reuter.

McMATH ABDUCTION

ALLEGED CONFESSION BY ACCUSED

BLACKED FACE WITH BURNT CORK

New York, May 7.

Kenneth Buck, who was arrested with his brother Cyril in connexion with the kidnapping of Margaret McMath, is alleged by the police authorities of Harwich Port to have confessed his part in the abduction.

General Needham, chief of the Massachusetts Police, says that Cyril drove the car while Kenneth, wearing a black hood, was in the car which restored the child to her father after payment of $70,000 ransom money.

Kenneth Buck is alleged to have confessed that he was actually concerned in the kidnapping, which took place when Margaret McMath was leaving her school in New York in broad daylight.

BLACKENED FACE.

It is stated that he said he blackened his face with burnt cork prior to the abduction, and assisted in seizing the girl, who was driven off in a fast motor-car.

Originally, the kidnappers demanded $250,000 as ransom from Mr. McMath, but this sum was whittled down in the negotiations, in which Kenneth Buck alleged that his brother acted as intermediary to about $70,000, of which Kenneth is alleged to have confessed he had about $10,000.—Reuter.

GANDHI INFLEXIBLE

TWENTY-ONE DAY FAST BEGINNING AT NOON

DOCTORS' FEARS

Poona, May 7.

Mahatma Gandhi is still inflexibly resolved to begin his 21 days' fast at noon to-morrow (Monday), and is employing his weekly "Day of Silence" which began at noon to-day by making his final preparations and by working off his correspondence.

Meanwhile, at the Mahatma's request, the doors of the Yeravda Gaol have been rigidly closed to visitors. Even Gandhi's son, Devadas, is no longer with his father.

Gandhi's release is expected within next 24 hours, but it is not yet decided where he will reside during the period of his fast.

His will to live is said to be strong, but the doctors fear that the fast may prove fatal.—Reuter.

FRENCH "DEBT PLAN" BASELESS

Official Denial of Report

Paris, May 7.

The story published in Le Petit Parisien hinting at the receipt of a proposal from Washington for the final settlement of the French war debt to America by means of a lump sum payment, is officially declared to be baseless.

The story suggested that a proposal had been made on lines similar to a scheme suggested in Britain recently for a settlement of the British debt, namely the payment of the principal of the debt, without interest, the transaction to be covered by the payment of one-third in gold, one-third on negotiable bonds, and the remainder held over temporarily but ultimately negotiable through the Bank of International Settlements.

SMOKE AND FIRE?

The article in Le Petit Parisien is signed by M. Albert Julian, who accompanied M. Herriot to Washington. It, therefore, caused widespread sensation.

It is generally believed that definite negotiations have been suggested by the United States, and the official denial by the Quai D'Orsay of the newspaper story is interpreted as probably meaning that no concrete proposals have been submitted by either side.—Reuter.

KOWLOON BUS FARES

HIGHER RATE FOR "SEASONS"

NO OTHER CHANGE CONTEMPLATED

Persistent rumours have been in circulation in Kowloon suggesting that the taking over of monopoly control by the Kowloon Motor Bus Company would be accompanied by all-round increases in bus fares.

Mr. Lam Ming-fan, Secretary of the new company which has been formed, has informed the Telegraph that it is not proposed to make any alteration to the existing fares on any of the mainland bus routes after control has been taken by his Company.

A slight increase, due to the extended facilities, will however be levied in the case of monthly tickets, which from $9 will be increased to $10.

These monthly tickets will be available for only the ordinary and cross-section routes grouped at the ferry terminus, and will not apply to the longer New Territories routes already in operation or in projection.

The conditions of the franchise called for settled fares during the first period of three years, after which the position may be reviewed.

President Roosevelt Explains Departure From Gold Basis

PERIL OF A FLIGHT FROM DOLLAR

BROADCAST TO NATION

CLAIMS VITAL SUCCESS

Washington, May 8.

"The United States was dying by inches when I took office," declared President Roosevelt last night in the course of a broadcast address to the Nation, reviewing his policy.

The President outlined the positive measures to meet the situation which have already been taken or which are now awaiting the approval of Congress, and said he had reason to believe that things were a little better than they were two months ago.

Industry had picked up, the railways were carrying more freight and farm prices were better.

NO "BALLYHOO."

"But," went on Mr. Roosevelt, "I am not going to indulge in proclamations of over-enthusiastic assurance. We cannot "ballyhoo" ourselves back into prosperity."

Referring to the Farm Relief Bill, which, with its inflation proposals, provides "wide powers for emergencies," President Roosevelt said that the extent of its use would depend entirely upon what the future has in store.

GOLD THREATENED.

On the subject of the gold embargo and America's departure from the gold standard, he said that a situation developed three weeks ago that resulted in a drain on the national supply of gold by foreign countries and threatened to produce a flight of American capital from the country.

PANIC THREATENED.

Asserting that a flight from the dollar might easily have resulted in a fresh financial panic and a complete stoppage of the wheels of industry, and that the gold was required as the basis of currency, President Roosevelt declared that he has decided not not allow any gold now in the country to get out.

RESERVIST LOSES REVOLVER

"SPECTATOR'S" COUP IN TERRITORIES

A strange story of how a Chinese Police Reservist when out target-shooting in the New Territories yesterday with a friend, was dispossessed of his service revolver in addition to a rifle, is being related in Police circles.

The two men concefned were Wong Woon-man, Chinese Police Reservist No. 34, and Wong Waiching. The former carried his service revolver which was not loaded and the latter had a .22 calibre Remington target rifle which he was teaching his friend to use.

They were engrossed in their occupation when, it is related, three other Chinese appeared on the scene and paid what was then assumed to be a polite attention to the proceedings.

One of the three, seemingly anxious not to miss anything, squatted close to the Police Reservist and after a little while asked if the rifle then held by the Police Reservist could shoot birds!

Wong Woon-man deigned no reply, but immediately the revolver was seized. The owner had left it lying on the ground. At the same time the man produced a dagger, which he brandished ferociously. His companions similarly armed then took away the rifle. Before they left, the robbers also took Wong Waiching's gold watch and chain.

A cargo coolie was injured yesterday through a fall into the hold of the s.s. Kaipoi and was removed to Hospital.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN.

When Should Spankings Stop?

By Olive Roberts Barton

If your child were as big as you are, would you whip him, or shake him, or order him about like a little slave?

Perhaps so, if you were very brave, and were willing at times to have the tables turned on you.

If we all kept this idea in mind when dealing with our children, it might be a very good thing, indeed.

Why is it that boys and girls who have attained their physical growth are usually exempted from such treatment? Surely it isn't from any fear of hurting their dignity or humiliating them, because little children are more easily humiliated as a rule than their older kin. I think it is because we shrink from imposing physical violence upon a grown body. Some way it seems more of a desecration to attack God's image full grown than when it is developing. This and perhaps a feeling that size is not to be trifled with.

Early Spankings Are Easy

And yet it is no argument. Because the older children become, with their clearer consciousness of right and wrong, less tendency to impulse, and a greater power to exert will, the fairer is physical punishment.

In the main I believe there is more "deserved" punishment among older children than among younger ones, yet the truth is not only the reverse, but a thousand times so. The punishment of small children is the commonest thing on earth. If we had a dollar in the treasury for every quick slap or shake the children get in a day we would surpass all the riches of India.

Rabid supporters of corporal punishment contend that children, being too young to reason with, know only one type of correction. Also they say that smarting skin is more wholesome than a smarting mind. I agree with them there, but the trouble is that the scar does not stay on the skin but on the mind. The mind is the acute victim of all physical punishment.

Questions for Parents

I dig up these questions for a purpose; will parents ask themselves these things:

"If Johnny were older would I correct him in another way than by using the hairbrush? Would I take the trouble to find out WHY he disobeyed? If he was merely careless or thoughtless, can I get results by talking to him as I would if he were eighteen? Why am I punishing him at nine for something I would never think of if he were older?"

I am not a champion of the argument system. We cannot enter into a debate every time children outlaw themselves. Neither must we threaten, for threatening is ignorant as well as useless. No, I believe there are times when corporal punishment is not a bad thing. With some children, of course, it is fatal, with others perhaps once in a lifetime is enough. But, yes—I shall have to confess that I believe it has its place under certain circumstances.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF.

By Alicia Hart

Don't let yourself get down in the dumps if a close-up of yourself discloses crows' feet about your eyes.

Those little lines should just be stamped out. The worst thing about them is the myth they have built up for themselves that they mean age. They may mean half a dozen other things, including fatigue, worry, bad vision, bad digestion, or even laugh lines.

Usually the only way to halt them is massage, with a nourishing cream. Some of them shouldn't be halted. If your eyes are the kind that crinkle up, in merry manner like old Kris Kringle, when you laugh, then know that you probably will have tiny lines at the outside of your eyes very young and you shouldn't mind them. They're part of your gay character!

Massage Is Remedy

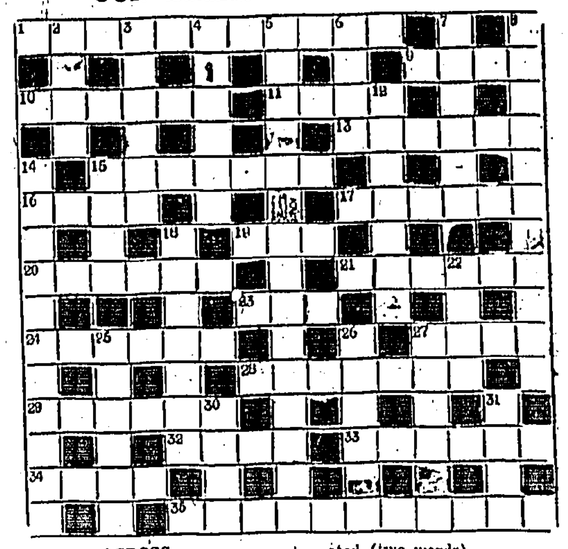

However, if you feel that the particular kind of crows' feet you have aren't in the least complimentary, then start in on them.

Massage one side of your face at a time. Hold your left second finger and thumb on your left cheek and temple, respectively, stretching the skin in between, while with your fingers of the other hand massage out from the eye, across the little lines. Use plenty of cream. Don't rub too hard. Rather smooth out the wrinkles often, a few strokes at a time.

Keep your skin moistened with good cream. As women get older, their skin tends to become dry. That is one reason why crows' feet and other wrinkles make inroads. Use cream night and morning and use a cream foundation before you put on your rouge and powder.

LOVE or MONEY?

CHAPTER XXIII

The Townsend limousine arrived at Lottie's apartment promptly at 10 o'clock. It remained there waiting until well after 11 because Mona and Lottie had set out at 9:30 to shop. On the list were shoes, hose, gloves, purse and even a rose-point handkerchief.

Lottie's suit, donned with much twirling and twisting before the mirror, had been pronounced exactly right for Mona. Both girls agreed that it was far better than a new one, hastily selected and not fitted properly.

Lottie selected a blouse to go with it. "You look simply adorable!" she told Mona as she tucked a stray lock carefully beneath the new blue hat. "That suit might have been made for you. It fits you exactly as well as it does me."

"It's sweet of you, Lottie, to take all this trouble—"

"No trouble at all, honey! I never dreamed I'd be lending my clothes to a bride for a swell wedding!"

"It isn't exactly the way I'd thought of marrying Barry," Mona said wistfully. "His uncle sending the car and me dashing out at the last minute to buy a bridal outfit."

Lottie smiled. "I know what you're thinking about," she said. "White satin—church aisles—Kitty and Kathleen tossing rose petals and your Ma weeping fit to kill—"

"Ma ought to be there, though," Mona said slowly. "I just can't understand it, Lottie. I mean this rush and everything."

"I know dear." Lottie's voice was sober. "The main thing is you're going to marry Barry."

She surveyed Mona approvingly, then dropped to her knees and busied herself with the hem of the skirt. "You say they're opening accounts for you," she went on, rising and scowling at the refractory hem. "And you're not even going to live at Twilands. Wonder why?"

"I'm to spend the year—or most of it except the hot months—at the town house," Mona repeated patiently.

"Learning to be a lady I suppose! Using the right fork. Which sauce to order with the fish. Learning to be a credit to the Townsend family—"

"Well, I've a lot to learn," observed Mona. "And I do want to be a credit to them!"

"What I mean is this," the other girl interrupted. "When you get back right after the ceremony you're going to find time heavy on your hands. No job, no house work. Just time to kill. Well, suppose we step out and buy your clothes together. Maybe I dress like a vamp myself but I know what the well-dressed young 63rd street wife should wear. That will take up part of your time. Of course I'll be as busy as a bee myself but I can get off now and then."

"Busy as which bee?" asked Mona, wrinkling her nose, her disturbing thoughts for a moment forgotten.

Lottie was wriggling into the sleeves of her coat. "The one that hangs around the hive and doesn't work, maybe," she answered. "Still, that's not fair. Min. I did work every day this week."

"And earned twice what they paid you," Mona said promptly.

"Do you have everything?" Lottie paused at the door to ask. "Take a last look at this place, Miss Moran. Maybe Mrs. Townsend won't be able to get here often."

"Don't be like that!" Mona's voice was distressed. "You know I'll always keep all my old friends."

Lottie slammed the door shut, tried to make sure of the lock and tossed the key into her purse.

It was a trim little bride whom Jackson, the chauffeur, saluted before he opened the door of the car with a low bow. Privately Jackson decided that the other young lady was decidedly attractive too. The chauffeur, thinking of his own happy but frowsy little wife back in the country, sighed.

The car glided up Seventh avenue to the park. "I've got an idea!" Lottie announced suddenly. Staying protests with a smoothly gloved hand, she leaned forward.

"Jackson," she called through the window which she had opened, ignoring the speaking tube. "Has Mr. Saccarelli's yellow roadster been at Twilands lately? He's a friend of mine. I thought maybe I'd see him to-day."

"The yellow roadster?" Jackson thought a moment. "Yes, miss. The yellow roadster was there yesterday. Not at the garage because Mr. Steve never bothers to drive to the garage. I saw the roadster last night parked by the hedge.

Lottie surveyed Mona triumphantly.

"Was it there this morning, Jackson? Is Mr. Steve staying over for the wedding? You've heard about the wedding, I suppose?"

Who indeed in the Townsend employ had not heard about the wedding? But Jackson reply was circumspect. "Begging your pardon, Miss, about the roadster I could not say. I left early to do some errands for Mr. Townsend."

"You didn't see it then beside the hedge this morning?"

Jackson smiled. "Mr. Steve used it last night. That's all I know. I saw him get into it when I drove the doctor to the station. That's the only time I saw it. Of course," apologetically, "Mr. Steve never parks it twice in the same place."

"And Twilands is full of parking places, isn't it?" offered Lottie. She was jubilant. This meant, of course, that Steve would be there. He'd be best man, most likely and she maid of honour—or whatever you could call it when the wedding takes place in a sick room.

They rode now in silence. The sun was shining and spring was in the air. A tender haze of green filled the distant fields and finally the dim outlines of Twilands raised above the sheltering branches across the valley.

Lottie craned her neck as the car entered the gate but failed to spy Steve's car.

"Listen, honey," she whispered as they drew up before the door, "if you want to back out right now I'm with you. Nobody on earth can make you go through with this if you don't want to—"

Jimmy appeared at the door, his face beaming. "Mr. Garretson will be down directly, Miss," he told Mona. "I wish you much happiness, Miss, if I may be so bold." He turned to the stairway and, bowing, pointed the way into the drawing room.

The room was empty. From a drawer in a table the butler drew out a package. It was a long, flat jeweller's box. "Mr. Steve asked me to give you this, Miss," he said. "Privately, Miss. He said you would understand."

"Mr. Steve!" Lottie exclaimed. "He's here?"

Jimmy shook his head. "No, Miss. He's gone. But he asked me to deliver the package before the wedding, Miss."

Lottie turned in dismay to Mona who stood with the open jewel case in her hand. It was the necklace and Mona had promised to wear it on her wedding day.

Mechanically she slipped the thin chain of diamonds about her neck and fastened the clasp.

"Gone?" Lottie repeated. "You mean Steve didn't want to stay for the wedding, Jimmy?"

"Hardly, I think, Miss. You see—"

Whatever Lottie was to see could not be explained at the moment. Mr. Garretson entered the room and, murmuring, the butler bowed himself out.

"Ah, Miss Moran!" Mr. Garretson was saying. "And I'm glad to know you, Miss Carr. You both look very charming."

"The gardener, sir, with the bouquet," Jimmy's voice came from the doorway.

The old gardener, hats in hand, shuffled forward to present an offering of delicate pink roses. "I've made every bridal bouquet for Twilands in 30 years," he said.

"It's beautiful. Thank you!"

"And you, Miss, if I may say so, are beautiful too."

Mr. Garretson turned to Mona approvingly. "The ceremony is to take place in the sick room," he said. "Townsend had a slight relapse last evening. Oh, nothing serious! But we thought it best not to allow him to rise. The doctor and nurse are there with the minister. Miss Lottie and I are to be the official witnesses."

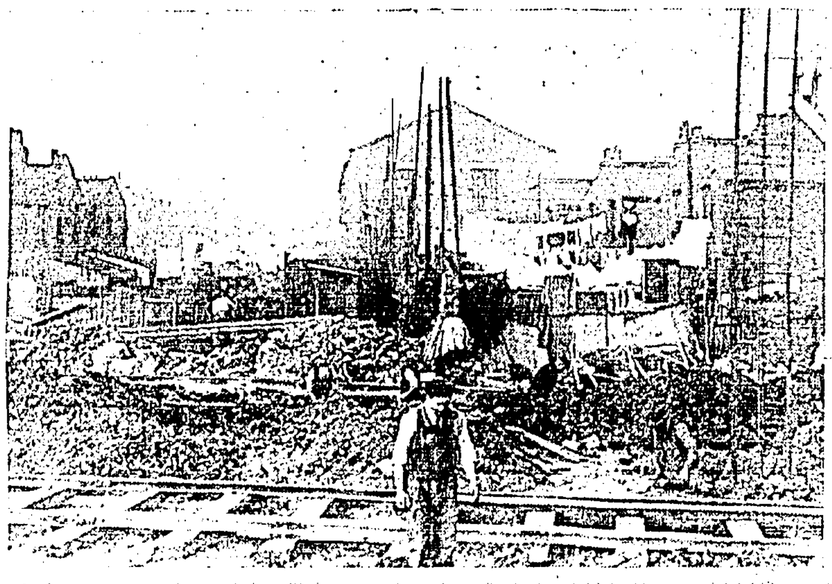

In silence they climbed the stairs. The staircase seemed interminable to Mona but they reached the top and moved down the dim, wide hall. Nearer and nearer to Barry's door. Which one would it be? Ah, here!

"Everything's ready, sir," a nurse whispered. She moved aside as Mona, large-eyed, clutching the roses, followed Mr. Garretson's gesture and stepped within.

If only they would give her one moment, just one, alone with him!

"Mr. Townsend has been very ill," the nurse said softly.

MYSTERY SHOTS

OLD CHINESE WOUNDED IN PEKING HOTEL

Peking, May 7.

An elderly Chinese who registered at the Wagons Lits Hotel in the Legation Quarter under the name of Chang Shih-heng, was seriously hurt and sent to hospital when a young unidentified Chinese entered his room this morning, fired two shots at him and escaped in a waiting car.

The assailant posed as the attendant to two Chinese who registered in the hotel last night under assumed names.

The Chinese police claim that a search of Chang Shih-heng's room revealed papers showing his connexion with Manchukuo.

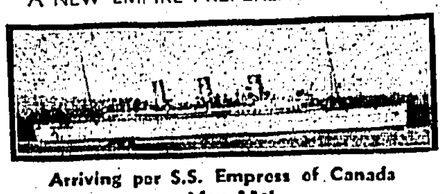

The case is very mysterious as the victim denied that anyone shot him, saying he was struck by an electric current.

Enquiries are being conducted.—Reuter.

INTO THE DAWN OF THE UNIVERSE

same as that of the average star or the sun for instance. It dawns upon us now that this is the birth of the stars, born in one or two generations from the great nebulae. We have reached another great epoch in the history of the universe and in our journey from the beginning of things down to the present. We pause now on our way and gaze at one of those great nebulae with its children, or perhaps grand-children, the stars. The children and grand-children do not attempt to go away on their own and found new families but remain under the parental roof, so to speak. The great central part of the parent nebula still remains a wheel-like structure, luminous and unbroken while round its edges circle with it the swarm, great or small, of smaller nebulae or actual stars. It seems all to be happening before our eyes, much that we see we do not understand, some seems to be seen only as it were in a dream, but what we now relate is more or less what we see. It is just a rapid survey and though we are eager to scan more deeply into the mysterious becoming of things we are not able to satisfy fully our curiosity and conjecture helps us a lot. The mighty processes that are going before our eyes are, may be, too immense for our comprehension and the secret ways thereof too deep for our minds to penetrate. But we saw, or thought we saw, the great nebulae rising up from primeval chaos and from the nebulae we saw, or thought we saw, the stars come forth in their myriads. In our own nebula or galactic system we saw, too, our sun being formed and revolving with its parent nebula and also rotating about an axis in itself but as yet we see no sign of the earth. As we have yet a very long distance to go on our journey down to the present we are not disappointed but hope to see later the epoch when our earth will arise out of this vast nebular island-universe system. In the mean time we have been watching some of those stars after their formation. Some are still gaseous but some have liquified and are still rotating. The gaseous ones flatten out and became lens-shaped and give off the gas that gets to the rim and it just clings round about them as a sort of atmosphere. The liquid ones are first of all globular in shape but as they go on rotating they flatten out orange-shaped, then cigar-shaped like an abnormally short thick cigar and then strange to say, the ends of the cigar thicken and the middle becomes like a neck, as the ends get thicker and more round the neck gets thinner and finally disappear altogether leaving two liquid bulls of matter revolving round one another. So this is how double stars seem to have to be. No one has actually, by using a telescope, seen a star actually splitting up like that, but we certainly thought we saw it happening as we passed by one of those star-spangled nebula and we just leave it at that. Other stars we see remaining unbroken, giant stars and dwarf stars, that one is 90 million times the size of the sun but only about 40 times its weight: the smallest is about the size of the earth, only a millionth of the size of the sun. We see bright stars 300,000 times as bright as the sun, and faint stars, one of these only one fifty-thousandth of the sun's brightness. We see some stars now bright now faint, for ever varying with regular pulsations and others for ever dark. Some are enormously hot some comparatively cool, yet immensely hotter than our earth. Another remarkable star that we notice too is what is called "NOVA" or a new star. It is an ordinary star which for some unknown reason suddenly flashes out with a thousand times its ordinary brilliance and then fades away. We take particular notice of these stars for they set us thinking and thinking—about what we shall say later. Flying on and on downwards through the aeons of time, from epoch to epoch, we come to the time when the earth which was not begins to be. But before we relate our experiences of that event let us look at our clocks and see what they tell us of all ages, of all things. From all that we saw, we come to the conclusion that there is evidence that the matter now in the Universe was not there from all eternity but began to be at a very remote time. We had various clocks with us, they didn't all read the same time but they were more or less in agreement that matter cannot be more than 200 million million years old. It is not our purpose to record from our jottings by the way how the matter came to be, suffice it to say that we agree with astronomers that it wasn't there always. The ages of the star we could not find from any agreement of our clocks only we reckoned that they must have lived for some millions of millions of years but just how many we could not say—after all what is a million million years? Well who knows? And the age of the earth, well we are not so sure of that either. If every thing happened more or less as we saw or thought we saw it happening then we might make a good guess by saying about 2,000,000,000 years. The epoch when life first appeared on the earth also we could not trust our clocks to tell us accurately. We couldn't even have foretold when life should appear for we had not enough information to go upon. Nor could we tell if there is life anywhere else in the universe. None of the stars we see can have life on them as far as we know but whether there are among the stars other bodies like our earth with life upon them we couldn't tell. Thus briefly did we survey the universe from the present day back to its very infancy a superficial survey for it was a fabulously long distance flight. Our trip has been more awe-inspiring then when we just explored the vast spaces of the universe and the mystery of it all is more magnificent as we fly up to the source and fountain head of the great long river of time.

(This is the second of a series of popular talks on astronomy given over the radio by Father MacDonald. The next talk will be given to-morrow evening from where he has lately been residing.

SPORT CRAZE IN LOCAL SCHOOLS

The cult of sport, slow to take a grip in the beginning, has emerged as a vitally important influence in Hongkong's educational establishments in the last two or three years. Every youth aspires to become an athlete, and he is not content to confine himself to any particular branch of sport; he is ready for them all. Intensive training, of a sort, goes on both in and out of school hours. Masters are appointed whose main duty is to cultivate the urge towards physical fitness. And who would challenge the need or, fundamentally, the desirability of encouraging this movement? Sport, properly directed, teaches strength, skill and chivalry. No-one would question the propositions that physical education has too long been neglected in Hongkong, that healthful exercise aids mental development and may go a long way to improving not only the physique but the moral outlook of the younger generation. But, and the qualification is very necessary, it is of prime importance that youth's enthusiasm should be directed into proper channels, that youth's attempts to attain proficiency are not obtained at too high a price. There is a growing body of opinion among those best able to study the growth of the cult of sport in local schools that the time has come when it should be taken under control. The prize-seeking spirit is too prevalent; more attention is paid to indulging the practice than instilling the nobility of athletics. Schoolboys, in many cases, it is suspected, are being forced beyond their powers by so-called sports masters who know nothing of training technique, not even enough to know that proper training alone enables athletic feats to be performed without undue strain, whose chief contribution appears to be the dosing of promising youngsters with Epsom Salts to keep their weight down. The result is seen all too frequently in Kowloon streets—a group of young Chinese in shorts and singlets, just about all-in, but still struggling along, having evidently undertaken a run in the evening over four or five miles in the ill-conceived belief that they are training, keeping themselves fit. Three times out of four it is definitely injurious to their health. Another development of this sport craze suggests that parents, too, are unaware that it can be indulged in to excess. We refer to its exploitation for advertisement. In some schools, special pains are taken to arrange the curriculum so that "organised sports" and physical exercises are always going on in full view of the street during the busiest hours of day, yet another encouraging bait for the bane of local education, the constant transfers of a boy from one school to another. The state of affairs is one requiring very serious attention. Obviously it does not apply to all educational institutions in equal measure. It might fairly be claimed for many that they are entirely free of the causes for critfcism enumerated. It might also be argued that the situation is merely a passing phenomenon, that once the first fine careless rapture has worked itself off, schools and youths will settle down to sounder and more steady practice. But it needs careful watching.

Science's Quest for 'Truth'

If it has ever been felt that modern science has a self-satisfied air about the body of knowledge it has amassed, one might heed the words of Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Astronomical Observatory. Dr. Shapley predicts that "practically all current theories" are going to prove mortal before so very long. The axioms of today will be the abandoned and outgrown theories of to-morrow; and Dr. Shapley adds: "The only eternal verities at present are the enthusiasm back of hypotheses, the will to know and the willingness to fumble as we learn to know." This viewpoint, to be sure, is the general rule among scientists. But laymen often misunderstand it, and because they misunderstand it they sometimes resent what they feel is a too dogmatic and inflexible attitude on the part of science. A proper understanding of it might save us from a good deal of our creepy dread of the rising of scientific knowledge. For it seems, now and then, as if the scientists were banishing mystery from the world. It seems as if science were about to say: "Thus and so was the world made, and thus and so was man himself put together, and you can make your religion and your poetry and all of your dreams fit this framework or else you can discard them—it makes no difference, for this is the way things are." Now that manner of talk is liable to upset the equilibrium of any thoughtful man. But it is precisely the kind of talk that the real scientist does not indulge in. He is more likely to keep in mind Plato's great picture—A dim cave, with man chained facing the inner wall, speculating fruitlessly on the shadows cast on the wall by beings who walk against the sun in the open air. The highest "scientific truths," the greatest discoveries, are simply shadows. To-day's verities are to-morrow's discarded theories; there remains, as Dr. Shapley says, only "the will to know and the willingness to fumble as we learn to know."

Russia's Way and Our Own

One of the most interesting items of news from Russia is the announcement that the government is to adopt a stern attitude toward workers who fail to work as hard as the government thinks they ought. Recent legislation makes it possible for the government to deprive a workman and his family of a job, food and his house for a single day's unjustified absence from work. Lenin himself urged that the dictatorship of the proletariat must not hesitate to use force against the proletariat itself when the occasion requires it. And this odd contradiction emphasizes once more the strange and fascinating contrast between the things that are being attempted in Russia and the things that are being tried elsewhere. Basically, we are seeking the same goal. But how differently we are going at it! Iron discipline, a rigid régime in which the individual counts for nothing and freedom is a discarded word—these characterize the working-out of the Russian venture. We want the same things the Russians want, but we intend to get them in our own way. The individual worker may not be lord of the walk, in other countries, but he is absolute lord over his own life. Freedom, prosperity and happiness must begin with him if they are to mean anything.

INTO THE DAWN OF THE UNIVERSE

By REV. D. MacDONALD, S.J.

Once more we set out in our magic aeroplane. Last time we conquered space in that breathless dash and now we aspire to vanquish time. We audaciously determine to fly back into time, back into yesterday and the day before and through all the yesterdays that have been until maybe we reach the boundary of time beyond which there was no yesterday.

So off we hop and at once we see the history of mankind unfolding itself backwards, the dynasties of China that were rise up in reverse order before us again. Each beginning in defeat and disaster and ending in triumph where history books tell us they began. On and on we go, the days of Confucius flash past us, the prehistoric days become to us as new yesterdays as in our flight all things are reversed and effects come before causes, decay before prosperity, death before birth.

We have no mind to gaze into the maze of human history laid out before us in inverted sequence, interesting though it be, for we wish to go on. Spurning the land marks of history with thought-like wings we find ourselves in the twinkling of an eye out before the time when men began to be, out even before this very Earth itself began to be. Now the sun does not rise or set for there is no earth upon which to rise or set. And still we hurry on and we are before the sun was, but still the way is open before us, we see no painted signboard saying "Beyond this there is no way." As we travel we gaze at the star cities of our former trip, they seem to be not quite the same as before yet in general they haven't changed so very greatly, so we travel on and on through fabulous periods of time watching our nebulous star cities becoming more and more nebulous. And lo! finally we are before the birthdays of the nebulae and pause in amazement and awe at the dawn of the universe. We have undone all human history, all stellar history; we have even brought back the great nebular foundations of the universe into the shattered fragments of which they were built and pause at the threshold of Univeral history and gaze upon the scene of desolation that lies before us. What do we find there? A shattered universe, not like the shattered ruins of some earthly city, but a universe shattered and reshattered until the whole of space becomes a chaos of the ultimate ruins of all things that were. The solid Earth and planets, the stars liquid or gaseous, the great nebulae all as it were ground back almost to nothingness. Space seems absolutely void but no, the materials of the universe are still here, not solid, not liquid, but gaseous molecules the universal matter of which all things are made are there desolved back into a thin gaseous substance. And the whole space of the universe is filled with that tenuous gas. And the gas is so thinly distributed that each molecule stands apart from its neighbours by a couple of feet whereas in ordinary air the molecules are only at about the distance of 1/8,000,000th of an inch apart. We are in primeval chaos before all things were that are. This primeval gas that now fills all space so thinly is perfectly uniformly distriubted, no little heaps here and there and no empty pockets but everywhere just the same. All is still. No movement, nothing like winds or weather depressions but just perfectly balanced stillness. The stillness of chaos, not of the chaos of disorder but the chaos of a yet unbuilt universe. We have arrived at our destination and now we set forth on our homeward journey. And lo, just as we start some great tremor passes through the length and breadth and depth of chaotic space and the whole face of the universe begins to change. The gaseous substance that was so uniformly distributed now disturbed in its balance begins to break up into immense masses of gas leaving regions empty or almost empty. The gaseous molecules mutually attract one another and from the outskirts of those immense masses of gas the molecules are sucked into that mass by its powerful attraction, in fact the gaseous mass becomes more and more compact and the empty spaces more and more empty. Very many of these immense masses of gas are now to be seen occupying at intervals the space that was before chaos, just like big globe shaped clouds. There is a great pressure within these great masses tending to make them burst up and shatter and go back the the original state of chaos but the greatness of their masses makes the force of suction, so to speak, by which everything is drawn or attracted towards the centre of the mass, powerful enough to prevent the mass breaking up, nay ever, powerful enough to make it contract and contract continuously. In some of these masses, as we watch them developing the suction is exactly towards the centre and these just become great big balls, so to speak of gas of fabulous size and weight. In others the rush of the gas does not go radially but gets a slight twist (we didn't just quite perceive how it got the twist) and so the whole mass starts off with a spinning top movement, i.e. the whole mass starts off like a sort of revolving ball of gas. We didn't see how that initial tremor came about that set everything agog, nor did we see who or what started it nor why it started, but somehow we got the idea that there was a tremor that woke up the universe from its slumbers and made it begin the work of its long day. The big masses that thus start their career revolving like great spinning-tops are to us more interesting than the others, for the others just don't do anything but wait, I suppose, for someone to give them a shove to wake them up, so we ignored them. The others contracting and revolving at the same time catch our interest because we see that as they get smaller and smaller, while yet of course immense in size, they revolved more and more rapidly. We estimate the masses of these big gas clouds, and, strange to say, their masses are just more or less the masses of the great star or nebulae of our first universal flight. Then the fact dawn upon us that these great gaseous masses that have just been born out of chaos are those very nebulae that we spoke of, but yet in their swaddling clothes of infancy. We notice that they do not all revolve with the same rapidity. We also notice that while in the beginning they were like immense globes, as time went on owing to there ever increasing speed of revolution they become more and more flattened, first like an orange, then like a thick, bulging lens and then like a thin lens, with an edge of gas very uniformly distributed at the rim. This rim gas now resembles in its uniformity the gas of primeval chaos only that it isn't nearly so thin, and as we contemplate it, lo, a tremor as before shivers it and it begins to form new and smaller nebular bodies. These new nebulae of the second generation still keep in the neighbourhood of their great parent nebulae and revolve with them while also revolving themselves like a wheel and similarly like their parents in their own good time they give off a colony of gaseous masses of the third generation. These later, and in fact some of the second generation nebulae, we find to have a mass more or less about the

The Very Idea!

THIS HIKING EVIL

By Eddie Kelly, Tramp.

"FOR the Love of Hike!"

Greater hate hath no respectable reporter than he who, at the stern command of a cornless Editor, meekly puts on his squeaky wenders, shovels a handful of dog biscuits into his pocket, and wends on a compulsory hike.

"The pikers—pardon! hikers—are out," said the Ed. to Eddie, "Go get the news."

Time was when the only hikers in the land were young women walking back after a little difference of opinion with a motoring boy friend.

But now it's different. Take yesterday, for instance.

The birds, hardly realising that Summer was here, were twittering in the trees, the sun was shining, and old man Kelly's son was dressed in the latest in hikeric.

It was just the kind of Sunday morning, when good men's thoughts turn to Hymns, and bad men's thoughts turn to "Hers".

Under ordinary circumstances, we would have been bowling along in Matilda (Matilda is our car, you know!) with one of the girl friends by our side, sneering at the fool hikers cluttering up the roadway.

Instead of which, obeying the stern call to duty, we hobbled painfully out to Taipo, cursing the thoughtless motorists who wanted the whole of the road.

We thought it was going to be no end of a hike. By 3 p.m. we thought there was going to be no end to the hike.

We were so burned up we felt like a fuel.

We were unlucky, too. After leaving the Peninsula Hotel, we had to walk about two miles past Nathan Road before we could find a motorist who would give us a lift out to Taipo.

We managed to stagger out of his car when we arrived there, and were just in time to wheeze our way along to the railway station and catch the last train back into town.

We met the girl friend at the Kowloon station.

"Have you been hiking?" she asked sweetly.

"In every joint!" we replied feebly.

YOUNG EDDY ON POLITICS.

Daddy (he calls us that), didn't you say $197,000 for new Government offices was charity?

You shouldn't listen when we're addressing your mother, son.

But what did you mean by charity, daddy?

If you must know, my boy, we doubted whether market value was calculated in the purchase of the old Sailor's Home and supposed that the Government was helping on the good work at the expense of Poor Old Taxpayer.

But can't he protest, daddy?

Look here, son, don't be a worry.

But, daddy, when the Government spends all that money don't they have to ask for a Vote or something?

Yes, my boy, a meeting of the Finance Committee is held. Our Unofficial members of Council attend, the vote is approved and the money is spent, unless it happens to be Public Works Extraordinary. Then you never know.

Is this public work extraordinary, daddy?

Well, strictly speaking, no.

Will they spend the money then, daddy?

Of course, my son.

Why didn't the Unauspicious protest, dady?

Unofficials, son. Un-O-Fish-awls. My dear boy, you must not expect me to be omniscient.

Sez you!

You'd better go to bed my lad if you're going to be cheeky.

But daddy, the Unauspicious asked questions about a thousand dollars being spent on digging up some old pots and pans, why didn't they ask about the Sailor's Home?

Embarrassing questions are not encouraged at Council meetings, my son.

What are embarrassing questions, daddy?

And that is how Edward Kelly Junior came to take his supper standing up.

Which reminds us that Dr. Shrubsall, addressing the Child Study Society recently, said that the child which in a temper bites an adult should be bitten back, not slapped.

But he did not say what course of action should be taken when an adult bites a child.

FOOCHOW FEARS

DEMONSTRATION BY JAPANESE?

Foochow, May 3.

Bishop Ding Ing-ong (Chen Yung-En) who was captured by bandits on 25th March near Shanyang, has been released and has returned to Foochow. He says he was well treated (according to bandit standards) and he does not appear to have suffered any serious injury from his four weeks captivity, but still it must have been a great strain upon him, as he is not a young man. Immediately after being released, he went on with the work which had been interrupted by his capture, namely the visiting of several villages and performing the rite of confirmation.

Banditry is still very prevalent in many places, and it is not easy to see an early end to it. There is still considerable unrest in the Northwest, but it is said to be due to "local communists," i.e. not part of the big Communist Army which still holds part of Kiangsi and western Fukien.

In some quarters there has for some time been a sense of apprehension, lest the Japanese should feel called upon to make a demonstration in Fukien. When eight American gunboats arrived at Pagoda Anchorage a couple of weeks ago, the rumour began to spread that the expected was about to happen, as they were taken by some people to be Japanese. These gunboats only stayed a few days, and have now gone up north. It is devoutly to be hoped that there is no ground for any of these rumours, and that Foochow may continue to hold its good reputation for peace and quiet.

I understand that Kuliang, the summer resort a few miles from Foochow, is likely to be filled to overflowing this coming summer. It is possible that the new motor road from Pagoda Anchorage will soon be finished, and that will eliminate many inconvenient delays for visitors.—Our Own Correspondent.

GERMAN POLITICS

BRUENING RE-ENTERS THE FIELD

Berlin, May 7.

The return to politics of the former Chancellor, Dr. Bruening, as chairman of the Centre Party, has caused a surprise in political circles, which are speculating on his relations with Herr Hitler.

It is pointed out, in this connection, that Saturday's meeting of the Centre Party, at which Dr. Bruening was appointed Chairman, closed with a resolution which reciprocated the sentiments expressed by Hitler in the Reichstag on March 23, when he desired co-operation, and referred to "those, who in a different way from ours, are devoted to Germany."

This is interpreted by members of the Centre Party as being the olive branch and is regarded as being all the more significant, since Herr Hugenberg's star is beginning to fade. Hugenburg is one of the two German Nationals left in the Cabinet, and his resignation has been daily expected. His colleague, Baron von Neurath (Foreign Minister) resigned to become Governor of Wurtemberg.

Hugenberg's position, also that of the German Nationals in relation to the Government and the Reich, will be decided before May 18, when the Prussian Diet hears the Government's statement of policy. The National "troops," the Steel Helmets, are already in process of absorption by the Nazis.

Meanwhile, Dr. Bruening has an opportunity of completely reorganising the Centre Party, for the resignations of all its leaders are in his hands.

Herr Bruening was Chancellor when the first National coup was made (Von Papen's.—Reuter Special.

LIBRARIES "PURGED."

Books On Sex To Be Publicly Burned.

Berlin, May 6.

Various public libraries were to-day raided by groups of students, who confiscated "un-German," books. The chief action was against Professor Magnus Hirschfeld's "Sexual Institute," which is known to medical men through the world for its exhaustive library on sexual matters.

The students carried off hundreds of works and pictures and conveyed them by motor car to Berlin University.

The books will be heaped and publicly burned in the Square outside the State Opera on May 10.

Nazi "Brown Shirts" occupied the Sexual Institute after the Library had been "purged."

The students dispersed after singing a song entitled. "We take German girls and women under our protection."

More libraries will be similarly purged during the week-end but private libraries will not be touched as the students are appealing to owners to hand out "un-German" books spontaneously.—Reuter.

MEMO. ON MANCHUKUO ISSUED BY LEAGUE

Geneva, May 5.

The memorandum drawn up and circulated by the League Secretariat to members of the Sub-Committee appointed to deal with the question of non-recognition of Manchukuo has now been made public.

It was prepared by a small committee consisting of three members in co-operation with the Secretariat.

The memorandum first enumerates the various treaties setting up International and public unions and technical organisations and especially all Conventions concluded under the auspices of the League of Nations.

The memorandum deals with the means of accession to these various Conventions, pointing out the steps which might be taken to prevent the Manchukuo Government from becoming a party.

In regard to Manchukuo currency it pointed out that private dealings in this currency cannot be prevented. Should such transactions be forbidden Manchukuo merchants will simply have recourse to other currencies, such as the Japanese. The only way effectively to place an embargo on exports from Manchukuo would finally be an embargo on Japanese exports.

With regard to the question of concessions in Manchukuo, the memorandum points out that is a matter for each State to warn its own subjects concerned that to accept any concessions in Manchukuo will be at their own risk and peril.

With regard to the question of Passports the memorandum states that, the members of the League, having pledged themselves not to recognise the Manchukuo Government de facto or de jure, Manchukuo passports will be treated as invalid.

Lastly, regarding the question of consuls, the memorandum says that as China is one of the countries which do not require exequaturs, it should be possible to appoint consuls in Manchukuo territory, which will assumed to be part of China temporarily outside the jurisdiction of the Central Government.

The sub-committee will meet on Tuesday to study the memorandum and it is hoped to hold the plenary meeting at noon after the sub-committee has met and discussed the question.

The sub-committee is not expected to reach any definite decision until the United States Government has made known its views.—Reuter.

JAPAN'S THREAT

RENEWED WARFARE ON LUAN RIVER

Peking, May 7.

Chinese telegrams from Luanchow foreshadow the immediate renewal of hostilities.

The Japanese have re-affirmed their demand to the Chinese troops to withdraw to the west bank of the Luan River, otherwise they will resume operations and drive back the Chinese.

The gravity of the situation is indicated by the hurried return to Luanchow from Peking of General Ho Chu-kuo, who command the Luan area.

General Ho Chu-kuo arrived here from Luanchow yesterday to report on the military situation to General Ho Ying-ching.

Interviewed by the Chinese press, General Ho declared that no Chinese troops had advanced beyond Peitaiho.

He added that the Japanese and Manchukuo troops at Halyangchen and other points have been reinforced during the last few days and apparently intended to resume the offensive, but the Chinese were prepared for emergencies.

Chinese quarters express considerable anxiety regarding the position at Kuyuan, with which telegraphic communication has been suspended since yesterday afternoon.—Reuter.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

—RIGHTEOUSNESS IS AT THE BOTTOM OF ALL THINGS.—Phillips Brooks.

A destitute Chinese, Leung Kee, committeed suicide yesterday when he threw himself from the second floor verandah of the Ming Fung Teahouse at Queen's Road West.

The 14th annual Sunday School festival was held at St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, the preacher at both the morning and evening services being the Vicar, Rev. W. Walton Rogers. Offerings will be devoted to the work of Dr. Barnardo's Homes. On Saturday afternoon the Sunday School pupils were entertained by the teachers and a most enjoyable time was spent. Tea was served, following which sports were held and a cinematograph show given in the Church Hall. Prizes won during the year for regular attendance were also awarded.

A Service dance will be held in the lounge of the European Y.M.C.A., Kowloon, at 9 o'clock to-night.

The wedding will take place at St. Teresa's Church, Kowloon Tong, on Sunday at 4 p.m., of Miss Maria Emilia (Mimi) Alves, daughter of Chev. and Mrs. J. M. Alves, to Mr. Frere Henry Hamilton Pipe.

A joint recital was given by Lydia Michel, vocalist, and Norda Mata, Danseuse Moderne, on Friday in the Swasey Hall at Lingnan University. The Recital was extremely well attended about 500 people being present, mostly Chinese which shows the interest that the youth of China is now taking in modern European music and dancing. The artists were greatly appreciated and encored several times. A similar recital which was also very well received and did much to advertise this one was given on the preceding day in the Canton Club, and was well attended.

LAWN BOWLS FIREWORKS BY THE POLICE

DRAMATICALLY DEFEAT THE CHAMPIONS

"DARK HORSE" TEAM REVEALS FORM

Only a few weeks ago, when these columns were reviewing the prospects of lawn bowls clubs, it was darkly hinted that from the Police first team this summer, might afford some of the biggest surprises of the year.

The hint has become a reality. The Police started their fireworks on Saturday, and they had the temerity to initiate the display at the expense of Craigengower, the league champions.

"Last year", said a P.R.C. enthusiast the other day, "we lost by only four shots to the Craigengower on their own green. This year we shall beat them." And they did.

It was a magnificent achievement. Furthermore it was no touch and go affair. Eighteen shots separated the teams at the close, and this gives a indication, better than the actual result, of the potentialities of the Police team..

And there were two or three other outstanding performances, among them being the K.C. C.'s succesful visit to Taikoo and the victory of the Peninsula club's second string over the redoubtable Recreio, who the previous Saturday had trounced the Police by the bare 50 shots.

Then again there was the achievement of the Craigengower reserves in going over to the Civil Ser-

V.R.C. & SWIMMING DEBT

Our attention has been drawn by the Secretary of the V.R.C., to a statement in the report of the meeting of the H.K.I.A.S.A. council meeting last Saturday, in which it was remarked that a letter had been received from the V.R.C. acknowledging the payment of the debt owing by the old Swimming Association.

The V.R.C. have neither received payment neither have they written any letter of acknowledgement of any payment according to Mr. Dixon, the Club Secretary.

We apologise for the error.

It is understood, however, that the payment of this debt is being made by the H.K.I.A.S.A. to the V.R.C. at 6 o'clock to-day.

CHINESE MISS INSPIRATION OF S. CHINA FORWARDS

(By "Veritas")

IT is rare thing to see a local Chinese football team outplayed and beaten by a definitely superior side, but such was the spectacle afforded the onlookers at the Club ground on Saturday, when the Hongkong Football Association XI defeated the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation selected side by two goals to nil for possession of the Governor's Cup.

And this game drove horse another truth. Take away Ip Pak-wa, Fung King-cheung, Tam Kong-pak and Cheng Shui-hong, and a representative Chinese team is like a car without gasoline.

Up to the forward line, the C.A.A.F. eleven was composed of the same players who have accomplished such doughty things for South China this season. Beyond was Wong Mee-shun and Mak Sui-hon, two normally brilliant forwards. Yet without the assistance of Fung, Ip and Cheng, they were completely impotent and the team as a whole suffered a reaction worthy of the description "extraordinary".

Granted the Chinese had to battle through the last half an hour with only nine men, two of the forwards being incapacitated, but so completely had they been subdued by the F.A. defence, that even if they had remained at full strength throughout, defeat would not have been averted.

The Chinese suffered chiefly through inefficient wingers, and inside men who would not, or could not, give Wong Mee-shun the type of passes which he must have if he is to score goals.

The defeat of the Chinese boils down to this. All credit must be given to the European rearguard for the exceptionally smart way they went about their work gaining the upper hand, but it is pretty certain that they would not have enjoyed quite as much success against a more capable set of forwards.

DISEASE SPREADS.

Eventually this inferiority which marked the forward line from the opening minutes of the game spread itself to the rest of the team and we had the unusual sight of seeing master tacticians such as Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang making palpable blunders in tackling, clearing and covering, whilst Leung Wing-chui lost all sense of direction in passing and most of his heart and enthusiasm in defending.

For the first time this season Lim Thin-chan, the South China custodian, was seen in active action, and he undoubtedly saved the team from a bigger defeat, although it must be conceded that he had the luck on his side on more than one occasion.

Wong's loneliness in the forward line was almost pitiful. He strove hard to outwit Mullane and Co., but when best placed for an individual effort, ruined everything by indulging in tactics which invited the displeasure of the referee and the usual penalty.

Mak Sui-hon, the Athletic forward, was extremely disappointing, and apart from missing an open goal before the F.A. scored their second point, showed little idea of constructive forward play and was sadly in error with his passes and in shooting.

THE ONLY FAIR RESULT.

The Football Association XI were far and away the better team. Any other result but victory would have been an insult to them. They were worth more than two goals.

The splendid work of the defence and half backs paved the way to success, and the forwards, deriving inspiration from their colleagues, maintained a pressure and a sympathetic collaboration which eventually broke down even the brilliant obstructive play of Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang.

Mullane and Sonny Bliss earned the honours in the rear division. Both touched absolutely top form, and frankly this was the finest game I have seen from Bliss for many a long day.

Ash, a little unhappy, slightly nervous at first, eventually settled down to a sound understanding with Mullane, and so well did they cover each other that Combey had a very quiet afternoon. What he had to do, he did well and with his customary expediency.

Playing their part in an intermediate trio which defied subjection, Pardoe and Andy Duncan worked strenuously and were practically always on top.

BRILLIANT BRYANT.

Bryant, brought in at the last minute through the absence of Gosano was the finest forward on

CHINESE ATHLETIC TAKE REVENGE

WEAK NAVY SIDE OUTPLAYED: KOWLOON SURPRISE THE POLICE

LACKING the services of Shirras, and James in defence, and the whole of their usual forward line, Warne, Davies, Langmead, McPhee and Cormack, the Navy offered poor opposition to the Chinese Athletic in the return league match yesterday and were well beaten 5-2.

THE football was of the poorest type, although the Athletic were value for the points. The game served as a reminder that the standard of football in the first division this season has shown a definite decline.

AS expected, South China defeated the Artillery in a charity match at Caroline Hill, scoring twice without reply.

THE Police had only themselves to blame that they conceded both, or any points, to Kowloon on Saturday. They had twice as many chances to score, not to mention a penalty, and they just ignored them. The familiarity of the ball in the Kowloon goal area enjoyed by the Police appeared to breed nothing but contempt, and when the homesters seized their three real goal-scoring chances, the result was as to be expected under the circumstances.

* * *

THE Engineers had no right to lose a point to South China in the Third Division. They outplayed their opponents in the second half, but finished wretchedly. By the same token the Chinese made an awful hash of one golden opportunity in the closing stages, but taking the game in general perspective, the soldiers should have won.

CHINESE SOCCER SUCCESSES

the field. He scored a magnificent goal, and deserved a couple more. He really had Lau Mau puzzled, which in itself is no mean achievement, and his dashing display did much to crack up the Chinese defence.

Purkins led the line with an energy which he seemed to accumulate as the match progressed, and although he could have used a little more discretion and steadiness in front of goal with more profitable results, the fact that he was a thorn in the side of the opposition made his presence valuable to the winners.

Ridley contented himself with scheming, and badly supported as he was by Brennan on the left wing, was not given a fair chance to reveal his best form.

Baldry displayed a big improvement on the right wing, and fell quickly into line with Bryant's movements, so that it was this wing which caused the greatest anxiety to the Chinese.

NO FANCY STUFF.

The football as a whole was entertaining even if it did lack the distinctive features of cleverness which usually characterises the appearances of the Chinese teams. The Europeans had little time for fancy work and made the most direct route for goal in the shortest time possible, while the Chinese endeavours to introduce intricate passing movements and were so poor that the opposition defence found little difficulty in ruining them.

This defeat prevented the Chinese from sweeping the trophy board for this season. They had already annexed the Senior Shield, Lai Wah Cup and Charity Cup, not to mention the Second Division League championship, and, it is pretty certain, eventually the First Division title.

But the Association's victory was well merited and they deserve to enjoy the distinction of being the first winners of the handsome Governor's Cup, which His Excellency personally presented after keenly following the whole game.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES.

Every spring, hundreds of sign-painters start out from Chicago or New Orleans, and busily cover the country side with their displays. It is a field of endeavour that motion pictures have heretofore overlooked, but it forms the background of "Face in the Sky", the Fox picture to be seen at the King's Theatre next Thursday.

Dealing with a unique type of romance between a travelling sign artist and a country girl, and directed by Harry Lachman, the noted European-trained director, the picture is heralded as a great success.

Spencer Tracy, Marian Nixon and Stuart Erwin have the leading roles and the cast includes Sarah Padden and Sam Hardy. Myles Connolly wrote the original story and Humphrey Pearson the screen play, with William Collier, handling the dialogue direction.

"Payment Deferred"

"Payment Deferred," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of the well-known mystery play, comes to the Queen's screen on Thursday, with the celebrated English actor, Charles Laughton, repeating the role he made famous both in London and on Broadway.

The play, which deals with a unique treatment of a murderer and his crime, is an adaptation of C.S. Forester's novel, one of the best-sellers among mystery stories, and was first presented in London, where it created a sensation, with Laughton's performance hailed as one of the artistic successes of the year. Later its triumph was repeated in New York.

A distinguished cast appears with Laughton, including Maureen O'Sullivan, Dorothy Peterson, Verree Teasdale, Ray Milland, Billy Bevan, Halliwell Hobbs and William Stack. The picture was filmed under the direction of Lothar Mendes, who previously directed "Interference" and "Convoy."

The story of "Payment Deferred" concerns a London bank clerk who, desperate for money, murders a rich nephew, hides the body and makes a fortune with funds stolen from the boy. He and his wife share the guilty secret, which at first haunts the murderer day and night, but which is gradually erased by time.

Later, however, the bank clerk becomes enmeshed with a blackmailing woman and his wife, in despair, takes poison. Circumstantial evidence points to him as the murderer and thus, through a trick of fate, he pays for a crime of which he is innocent while his real crime goes undiscovered.

Among the dramatic thrills are the gripping moment when the clerk realizes that he is about to become a murderer; the discovery of the crime by his wife, and the amazing denouement in which the criminal is trapped despite the fact that he is innocent.

French Talkie to be Shown

After much publicity, a French film of Parisian footlights will be shown at The Central Theatre next Wednesday. The title is "Paris-Beguin", or "Paris Caprice" and is an Osso Film presentation, starring the celebrated French stage actress, Jane Marnac, and Jean Brabin.

Although the dialogue is entirely in French, there are English subtitles giving the main points of the dialogue at the foot of the screen as the action proceeds; but so consummate is the acting of the French artists, that words are really unnecessary. The setting of the film is distinctly novel; it is a story of Parisian stage-life, in which the heroine is faced with the ordeal of playing behind the footlights a tragedy of love, the counterpart of which she has actually experienced a drama which, when she read the acting script, she thought too impossible ever to occur in life.

The whole atmosphere of the setting is true to French theatrical life, and the story itself, no less than the acting, true to life itself. The picture should not be missed by any who have longed to know something of this aspect of the "Gay Capitol."

"Mr. Robinson Crusoe"

The arrival at Papeete of the Douglas Fairbanks company and the chartered yacht, Invader, to film "Mr. Robinson Crusoe", showing at the King's Theatre, was the signal for a reception and jollification such as has never been exceeded in the South Seas.

The Invader, besides appearing in the picture, served as a sea-going studio for "Doug" during his stay in the South Seas, carried four monkeys and two parrots, a load of dynamite and other explosives.

"Doug" was welcomed to the islands by Governor General Jore on behalf of the French Government, and an immediate bombardment of receptions began featuring wild pig feasts and native dances, attended by tribal rulers and South Sea belles.

In return for this hospitality, Fairbanks gave the natives their first view of talking motion pictures. With special equipment taken with him, Doug staged a show for the benefit of the Pierre Loti Memorial, offering as the feature attractions "Mickey Mouse" and "Around the World in Eighty Minutes."

"Hot Pepper"

Flagg and Quirt, the militant Marines, have exchanged their uniforms for silk hats and full dress clothes. They appear in the Fox comedy, "Hot Pepper", dressed in the height of fashion and living like kings in their roles as night club owners. The production comes to the King's Theatre very shortly.

Preserving the spirit of the characters of Flagg and Quirt, originated by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, they continue to battle over women and particularly over "Pepper", an impetuous and fiery little stowaway from South America found on one of Flagg's rum ships.

Edmund Lowe again appears as Quirt and Victor McLaglen as Flagg. The role of "Pepper" is enacted by the vibrant and dynamic Lupe Velez. El Brendel, the Swedish dialect comedian, plays a featured role and others in prominent parts are Lilian Bond, Boothe Howard, Gloria Roy and Russ Clark. Much colour is said to be added to the night club scenes by a singing and dancing chorus with which Miss Velez appears in a dance number.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

RESERVOIRS SHOW FALL OF LEVELS

The Water Return for April notes that the rainfall for the month as recorded at the Royal Observatory was only 3.510 inches as compared with 8.435 inches during April last year.

As the result of very dry winter and spring, further restrictions on supply have been imposed on the island. This year during April there was only a ten hour daily supply in two periods. In April 1932, the supply was full except that the rider main district supply was through the street fountains. In Kowloon this year there were the same restrictions. In April last year Kowloon had a full supply.

The island reservoirs at the end of April were well below overflow —Tytam Tuk no less than 60 ft. 8 ins. below, and less than a quarter full. The total in storage on the island on April 30 was 672.59 million gallons, compared with 710.15 on the same date last year. In Kowloon there were 255.24 million gallons stored, compared with 212.06 last year.

The Hongkong consumption for the month was 250.57 million gallons (248.20 in April last year). Of this total, 4.03 million gallons came from Kowloon by pipe line. With an estimated population of 385,750 the Hongkong consumption was 21.7 gals. per head per day (21.6 last April).

The Kowloon consumption was 141.52 million gallons (15.1 gals. per day on an estimated population of 312,600) compared with 152.24 million gallons (17 gals per head per day) in April 1932.

LOVE OR MONEY?

The sick man, lying back on his pillows, opened his eyes. It was not Barry. Mona understood it all in a flash! It was Barry's uncle—the tall, slender man who had been lunching with Mr. Garretson at the Savarin!

The stern eyes, opening, held the girl's for a long moment. "Miss Moran?" he said. "Thank you for coming. I'm sorry my rascally nephew can't be here to witness our marriage. He insisted on sailing for South America last night."

THE EMPIRE FAIR

DAILY BROADCAST OF NEWS

Exhibitors and intending visitors to the British Empire Fair 1933, to be held at Kowloon on May 24 and the three following days, will be interested to learn that by permission of the chairman and members of the Broadcasting Committee, short daily announcements will be made from the Studio at the luncheon hour and again in the evening. These announcements will be compiled by an experienced member of the Fair Committee who is well acquainted with the progress of the arrangements from day to day. The announcements are both informative and interesting, and will be well worth while listening to, if only to follow the urge of curiosity to ascertain what is being done in the way of organising the Fair, and what to expect in the numerous displays which exhibitors will present in the opening day and that will remain on view during the remaining days of the Fair.

The selection of the news items for the first announcement made from the Broadcasting Studio will give readers of the S. C. M. Post an idea of what listeners-in may expect by way of information. For example, the fact was made public that the chairman and committee of the Fair have issued an official invitation for the Fair, the opening ceremony of which will be performed at the Peninsula Hotel by His Excellency the Governor at noon on Wednesday, May 24, Empire Day. There will be an official luncheon following the opening ceremony.

Last Friday evening's broadcast announcement which, by the way, was the first of the series, fittingly epitomised the exhibits that will be staged by the Taikoo Dockyard and Engineering Co. of Hongkong, Ltd. The list was followed by a comprehensive outline of the famous dockyard at Quarry Bay, describing in brief its lay-out, equipment and capabilities, and the most important materials used in the building and repairing of ships at Taikoo. If Friday's announcement can be accepted as a specimen of what will be issued by the Fair Committee as news announcements concerning the Fair, there can be no doubt that thousands of Hongkong listeners and many more thousands on the South China Coast and in adjacent Treaty ports will await the daily broadcast short talks on the Fair with pleasure and interest.

Firms Dealt With.

Firms and public utility concerns such as the Hongkong Electric Co., the China Light and Power Co., the Hongkong Telephone Co., to mention a few out of a long list of enthusiastic supporters of the Fair, will be dealt with, in the course of a survey of the important part they are taking and their practical, substantial contributions to make the Empire Day Fair a success.

No compulsory fee for space has been asked from exhibitors, nor will there be any charge for admission to the Fair. Indeed, in the case of the peasantry of the New Territories, the committee is making arrangements with the Railway authorities and the transport companies for free tickets for the farmers travelling from the outlying districts to the Fair at Kowloon. The Peninsula Hotel is the venue, and the large pavilion on the opposite side on Nathan Road will house a collection of motor-cars, lorries and trucks of British production, besides machinery in motion and British products generally, never before presented in Hongkong under a single roof.

THE FOLLY OF WAR.

DEBATE AMONG WAH YAN COLLEGE STUDENTS

A most interesting debate on War was held on Saturday in the College Hall of Wah Yan College. The subject was worded thus: "That War is an unwise and inefficient way of settling international disputes."

A number of excellent speaches were delivered on either side, and the division at the end showed how evenly the house was divided.

The speakers on the Government side laid emphasis on the waste of warfare, on the famine and suffering which it brings in its wake, on the folly of fighting, as a means of deciding questions of right and wrong, and on the fact that war never really settles any issue, but merely stores up vindictiveness and hatred for future generations.

For the Opposition the chief points made were that this is not an ideal, but a very imperfect world, and that frequently the only course left to the nation on the defensive is to take up arms in her own defence; and that war, terrible though it be, brings out much that is fine in human character, heroism, loyalty, unselfishness.

Some points from the speeches were:

"War brings desolation to fruitful lands; it causes remorse and suffering even when carried on under the most favourable conditions. War means loss and waste. It seems to turn the tide of progress backwards, and undo the advance of years. And the evils of war do not end with the war itself. In its aftermath come famine and unemployment."

"Times of peace tend to lead men to sloth and indolence and selfishness, whereas war breeds a race of heroes. War may be a destroyer, but civilization has often followed in its wake."

"War is only adopted by unreasonable savages, to whom arbitration is unknown. Two coolies may settle their differences with knives; but that is hardly the method of civilized and educated gentlemen."

"Is anything better than war for its purpose? Has peace, can peace, ever settle international disputes?"

"Would you have a small brother fight his big brother for his fair share of cakes?"

"War teaches people to be cruel, selfish and callous, instead of producing heroism and unselfishness. The stronger always wins, hence war is entirely futile as a means of deciding questions of right and justice. Further, the defeated country is never at rest, till she obtains her revenge. Countries have learned enmities through war, and these enmities have lasted from generation to generation; of, France and Germany, Japan and China.

"The great men of all ages have been anti-war. The reason is because its effects are not lasting; it effects a temporary, and frequently unjust peace, but leaves the combatants crippled for generations, and in the hearts of their citizens hatred and revenge."

The division at the end resulted in 15 votes for the Government, and 15 for the Opposition. The motion was left undecided.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Do the good players, who are successful in winning championships, always strictly adhere to the system they are playing? I think the answer given by Willard S. Karn of New York, one of the five outstanding bridge players of the world, to this question is worth repeating.

He said, "Does a good football team play mechanical football?" He further asked, "When the signals are given for a certain play, and the ball-carrier suddenly realizes that the defence has the hole plugged, but sees another opening on the other side of the field—isn't it good football for him to dodge through this weak spot and gain five or ten yards?"

And so, he says, it is in contract. Bid with your partner, but at times, when you are opening, have the courage to do the unusual.

He gives the following hand which he played recently in a New York tournament as an example.

	♠A-Q-9-3 ♥9-8-7-4-2 ♦7 ♣8-6-3
♠J-10-6-2 ♥A-K-10 ♦K-8 ♣A-K-7-2	NORTH WEST EAST Dealer SOUTH	♠K-7 ♥Q ♦A-Q-J-10-9-5-2 ♣Q-J-5
	♠8-5-4 ♥J-6-5-3 ♦6-4-3 ♣10-9-4	23

The Bidding

Mr. Karn sat in the North. His partner in the South was the dealer and passed. West bid one club. Mr. Karn knew that the West player in this particular hand did not open on weak first or second hand bids. With a pass from his partner, he reasoned that possibly top score on the board would be no trump, therefore he wished to stop a no trump contract.

Both sides were vulnerable, and generally to overcall, when vulnerable, you are required to hold a five-card suit and about two and one-half high card tricks. Here he was with only one and one-half tricks and a four-card biddable suit.

It is true he might be subjected to severe penalty to overcall, but as he could overcall the West hand with a bid of only one, and his hand was so weak, he put in a bid of one spade. If doubled, he could get out in hearts.

East bid two diamonds—this is a strength-showing bid as it is a new suit, and made freely over an adversary's call. South passed and West bid three no trump. Mr. Karn then passed. East showed a powerful hand by bidding five diamonds, but Mr. Karn's bid of one spade vulnerable had done its damage.

West, who had bid three no trump on his four small spades, was now afraid of losing at least two spade tricks and let the contract die at five diamonds. Of course, the small slam was easily made.

It was surprising to note, after looking over the scores of the 14 tables which played the same tray, that not another vulnerable North player in the room put in the overcall of one spade.

Mr Karn, in explaining the hand later, said he realized that West was not going to play the hand in clubs—that they were going to find a better declaration—and, in his opinion, he thought no trump would give them top on the board.

If he could get in a cheap lead-directing bid, or a bid that might prevent them from arriving at a no trump contract, he would receive a good score on the board. At every other table in the room a small slam was arrived at in either no trump or diamonds.

If the opponents had doubled one spade, Mr. Karn would have bid two hearts, which would also have been doubled, but the hand can be played so as to go down only three tricks doubled for a minus score of 900, which would still be a very fine result on the board.

Proper timing of bids of this kind is what counts, and one must be careful not to use them too often.

LOCAL WEDDINGS

LANDOLT-CHONG

St. John's Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, when Miss Doris Mae Peter Chong, daughter of Mrs. Peter Chong of Sydney, Australia, and of the late Mr. Peter Chong, became the bride of Mr. Henry Richard Landolt, son of Mr. John Landolt and the late Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Landolt, of Hongkong.

The Rev. N. V. Halward, M. A., M.C., officiated.

Entering the Church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Andrew W. Ho, by whom she was given away, the bride wore a dress of white satin charmeuse with chantilly lace coatee and train, the latter being trimmed with orange blossoms finished off with lovers' knots in silver. The bridal veil, heavily embossed, was held in place with orange blossoms. White gladioli and maiden hair fern made up the bride's bouquet.

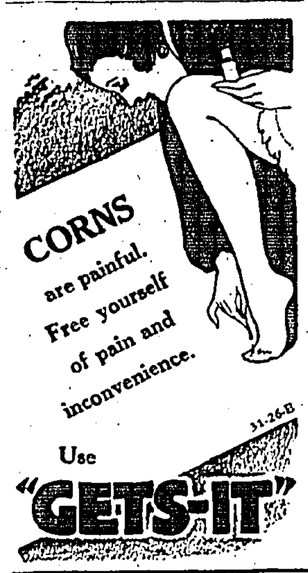

A large number of friends of both bride and bridegroom attended the reception which was subsequently held at Lane Crawford's Restaurant. Later Mr. and Mrs. Landolt left for Canton and Macao where the honeymoon is being spent. The bride's going away dress was of powder blue Burmese crepe with hat and shoes to tone.

BOYES—DA SILVA.

Mr. John Lewis Boyes, a Chinese Maritime Customs officer and son of Mr. John Lewis Boyes and the late Mrs. Boyes of Essex, London, was married on Saturday afternoon at St. Joseph's Church to Miss Lucilla Victoria da Silva, the daughter of Mrs. Constancia Maria Gomes da Silva and the late Mr. L. L. da Silva. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Father Antonio Riganti.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. L. M. Gomes, was attired in white plain silk satin with long puff sleeves and a bunch of orange blossoms at the waist. She wore a diamante head dress and a veil of Brussels net with orange blossoms dropped at the side. Her bouquet was of Adam's lilies.

A reception was later held at 400 Lockhart Road, while the couple subsequently left on their honeymoon which is being spent in Macao. The bride left in a dress of brown crepe de Chine, yellow bodice with a cage straw hat to match.

A HOUSEBREAKER.

FOREIGNER CAUGHT IN A KOWLOON FLAT

Sentences totalling six months in all were passed on Joseph Gerscowigz, described as a Polish Jew, when he was charged before Mr. Grantham at the Kowloon Magistracy on Saturday morning on three charges, (1) housebreaking, (2) possession of instruments fit for an unlawful purpose and (3) being in the Colony without a valid passport.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the last charge, but denied the first two.

It was stated by Detective Inspector Rozeskwy that defendant was found on the ground floor of No. 33 Ashley Road at about 6 p.m. on May 4. These premises were occupied by two Europeans, who were not there at the time. The house-boy left the premises at about 4 p.m., locking the front door after him. Returning at about 6 p.m., he found the lock of the front door forced open, and, walking in, he found defendant working on the back door. Defendant ran out by the back way into the yard, but the house-boy followed him and detained him. After a while, they went to the Police Station together.

In consequence of the house-boy's report to the Police, Detective Sergeant Russel was sent to No. 33 Ashley Road. There he found a crow-bar, a jemmy and two skeleton keys. Defendant denied all knowledge of these instruments at the time.

Evidence was given by Mr. A. Kiefer, one of the tenants of the floor, that he left the house at 5.25 p.m. and that he locked the front door.

In his statement, defendant said he arrived from Canton on the night of May 3 and stayed at the Asia Hotel. He was at No. 33 Ashley Road to look for a friend, who might be able to tell him of the whereabouts of a Dr. Mals.

His Worship decided to convict him on all charges, and passed sentence of six months on the first, three months concurrently on the second and one month concurrently on the third.

Only 15 bean cake factories are now working, compared with 35 a year ago.—Reuter Special.

FRENCH WAR DEBT STORY OFFICIALLY DENIED

NO CONCRETE PROPOSALS YET MADE

WASHINGTON POSITION DEFINED

EDUCATING PUBLIC TO CONCESSIONS

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, May 8, 8.28 a.m.)

WASHINGTON, May 7.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THE INFORMATION COMING FROM A USUALLY WELL-INFORMED SOURCE, THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL NOT TRANSMIT ANY WAR DEBT MESSAGE TO CONGRESS IN THE NEAR FUTURE, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Times.

If Mr. Roosevelt finally decided to send a Message, it will be after the completion of the Administration's pending domestic programme, the report adds.

Most of the President's close advisers believe that he will seek special powers for dealing with the debt question before the adjournment of the special session of Congress, but he thinks that it is necessary, in the meantime, to educate the public to the necessity for making concessions.

Meanwhile, no official criticism has been made of the statement by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in his broadcast statement on Friday night, to the effect that "As we are both pledged to make the World Economic Conference a success, this agreement means that we are to use every means in our power to find a way to settle those debts.

The settlement of the debts issue should come before or during the world Economic Conference, the opinion being held both in Washington and London that upon the war debts settlement depends the success of the Conference.—Reuter.

FRENCH "DEBT PLAN" BASELESS

Official Denial of Report

Paris, May 7.

The story published in Le Petit Parisien hinting at the receipt of a proposal from Washington for the final settlement of the French war debt to America by means of a lump sum payment, is officially declared to be baseless.

The story suggested that a proposal had been made on lines similar to a scheme suggested in Britain recently for a settlement of the British debt, namely the payment of the principal of the debt, without interest, the transaction to be covered by the payment of one-third in gold, one-third on negotiable bonds, and the remainder held over temporarily but ultimately negotiable through the Bank of International Settlements.

SMOKE AND FIRE?

The article in Le Petit Parisien is signed by M. Albert Julian, who accompanied M. Herriot to Washington. It, therefore, caused widespread sensation.

It is generally believed that definite negotiations have been suggested by the United States, and the official denial by the Quai D'Orsay of the newspaper story is interpreted as probably meaning that no concrete proposals have been submitted by either side.—Reuter.

MURDER PLOTS ALLEGED

KOREANS ARRESTED IN DAIREN

INCITEMENT IN SHANGHAI

Dairen, May 8.

Korean malcontents in Shanghai are being incited "by certain quarters" to make attempts at the assassination of leading figures in the Manchukuo administration, according to a local Japanese newspaper.

The journal alleges that these Korean malcontents are plotting the assassination of a number of Manchukuo officials, including Mr. Pu Yi, the Executive Head of the State and General Muto, the Japanese commander-in-Chief and plenipotentiary.

It is stated that some of the would-be assassins have already been arrested in Dairen, on their arrival from Shanghai en route to Changchun.

SPECIAL PRECAUTIONS.

The report adds that in view of the possibility of some of them getting through, special precautions are being taken to safeguard the party of Japanese notabilities at present touring Manchuria, among them being Marquis Kuni, the younger brother of the Empress of Japan.—Reuter.

It is authoritatively intimated that M. Litvinoff, the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, has offered to sell the Chinese Eastern Railway, either to Japan or to Manchukuo.

When he was told that this would be tantamount to the Soviet recognising Manchukuo, M. Litvinoff replied that he was fully aware of the implication, but he did not mind as the Soviet Government was not a signatory to the League resolution against recognition.—Reuter.

Meanwhile, at the Mahatma's request, the doors of the Yeravda Gaol have been rigidly closed to visitors. Even Gandhi's son, Devadas, is no longer with his father.

Gandhi's release is expected within next 24 hours, but it is not yet decided where he will reside during the period of his fast.

His will to live is said to be strong, but the doctors fear that the fast may prove fatal.—Reuter.

KOWLOON BUS FARES

HIGHER RATE FOR "SEASONS"

NO OTHER CHANGE CONTEMPLATED

Persistent rumours have been in circulation in Kowloon suggesting that the taking over of monopoly control by the Kowloon Motor Bus Company would be accompanied by all-round increases in bus fares.

Mr. Lam Ming-fan, Secretary of the new company which has been formed, has informed the Telegraph that it is not proposed to make any alteration to the existing fares on any of the mainland bus routes after control has been taken by his Company.

A slight increase, due to the extended facilities, will however be levied in the case of monthly tickets, which from $9 will be increased to $10.

These monthly tickets will be available for only the ordinary and cross-section routes grouped at the ferry terminus, and will not apply to the longer New Territories routes already in operation or in projection.

The conditions of the franchise called for settled fares during the first period of three years, after which the position may be reviewed.

BISHOP HALL'S PLANS

LONG TRIP THROUGH INTERIOR

The Bishop of Victoria, Rt. Rev. Ronald Hall, who sailed for Shanghai last week to attend the meeting of the National Christian Council, at the urgent personal request of Dr. Cheng Ching-yi, on his return to Hongkong, hopes to sail directly for Canton and Kongmoon, where he will carry out a Confirmation service in each city.

The Bishop will leave for Pakhoi on May 20, and from there go to Nanning and so on to Yunnan and back direct from Haiphong early in July.

At Nanning, on Trinity Sunday, Bishop Hall will ordain Mr. W. Molyneux to the Deaconate. The Rev. Wilfrid Stott is in charge of the mission work in that area.

President Roosevelt Explains Departure From Gold Basis

PERIL OF A FLIGHT FROM DOLLAR

BROADCAST TO NATION

CLAIMS VITAL SUCCESS

Washington, May 8.

"The United States was dying by inches when I took office," declared President Roosevelt last night in the course of a broadcast address to the Nation, reviewing his policy.

The President outlined the positive measures to meet the situation which have already been taken or which are now awaiting the approval of Congress, and said he had reason to believe that things were a little better than they were two months ago.

Industry had picked up, the railways were carrying more freight and farm prices were better.

NO "BALLYHOO."

"But," went on Mr. Roosevelt, "I am not going to indulge in proclamations of over-enthusiastic assurance. We cannot "ballyhoo" ourselves back into prosperity."

Referring to the Farm Relief Bill, which, with its inflation proposals, provides "wide powers for emergencies," President Roosevelt said that the extent of its use would depend entirely upon what the future has in store.

GOLD THREATENED.

On the subject of the gold embargo and America's departure from the gold standard, he said that a situation developed three weeks ago that resulted in a drain on the national supply of gold by foreign countries and threatened to produce a flight of American capital from the country.

PANIC THREATENED.

Asserting that a flight from the dollar might easily have resulted in a fresh financial panic and a complete stoppage of the wheels of industry, and that the gold was required as the basis of currency, President Roosevelt declared that he has decided not not allow any gold now in the country to get out.

CHEAPENING DOLLAR.

The Administration, he continued, now has the definite objective of raising commodity prices to such an extent that borrowers will, on the average, be able to repay the same kind of dollar as they borrowed.

"We shall not seek to let them get such a cheap dollar that they are able to repay their debts at a great deal less value than they borrowed at."

The powers given to him by Congress for this purpose—inflation of the dollar—will be used "when, if and as may be necessary to accomplish this purpose."

RECENT CONVERSATIONS.

He said that his conversations with foreign envoys have brought unity of action for progress on disarmament and economic establishment.

The International Economic Conference must succeed. The future of the world demands it. We all pledged ourselves to use our best joint efforts to this end.

FOUR OBJECTIVES.

President Roosevelt also said that his conversation with foreign envoys had four great objectives. The first was a general reduction of armaments in order to remove the fear of invasion and to help balancing the Government budgets and reducing taxation.

The second, he said, was the cutting down of trade barriers, the third was the stabilisation of currencies and the fourth was the re-establishment of friendly relations and greater international confidence.

He declared that the foreign visitors responded most helpfully.

SILENT ON WAR DEBTS.

A notable omission from his speech was any reference to war debts, which are regarded as the keystone of the World Economic Conference. This is taken to indicate that President Roosevelt does not consider the time is ripe for taking the country into his confidence regarding his plans, which are still in an uncompleted stage.

He concluded, however, by emphasizing the need for American co-operation with the rest of the world. The return of prosperity to the United States cannot be permanent unless prosperity was shared with the rest of the world.—Reuter.

McMATH ABDUCTION

ALLEGED CONFESSION BY ACCUSED

BLACKED FACE WITH BURNT CORK

New York, May 7.

Kenneth Buck, who was arrested with his brother Cyril in connexion with the kidnapping of Margaret McMath, is alleged by the police authorities of Harwich Port to have confessed his part in the abduction.

General Needham, chief of the Massachusetts Police, says that Cyril drove the car while Kenneth, wearing a black hood, was in the car which restored the child to her father after payment of $70,000 ransom money.

Kenneth Buck is alleged to have confessed that he was actually concerned in the kidnapping, which took place when Margaret McMath was leaving her school in New York in broad daylight.

BLACKENED FACE.

It is stated that he said he blackened his face with burnt cork prior to the abduction, and assisted in seizing the girl, who was driven off in a fast motor-car.

Originally, the kidnappers demanded $250,000 as ransom from Mr. McMath, but this sum was whittled down in the negotiations, in which Kenneth Buck alleged that his brother acted as intermediary to about $70,000, of which Kenneth is alleged to have confessed he had about $10,000.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN.

When Should Spankings Stop?

By Olive Roberts Barton

If your child were as big as you are, would you whip him, or shake him, or order him about like a little slave?

Perhaps so, if you were very brave, and were willing at times to have the tables turned on you.

If we all kept this idea in mind when dealing with our children, it might be a very good thing, indeed.

Why is it that boys and girls who have attained their physical growth are usually exempted from such treatment? Surely it isn't from any fear of hurting their dignity or humiliating them, because little children are more easily humiliated as a rule than their older kin, I think it is because we shrink from imposing physical violence upon a grown body. Some way it seems more of a desecration to attack God's image full grown than when it is developing. This and perhaps a feeling that size is not to be trifled with.

Early Spankings Are Easy

And yet it is no argument. Because the older children become, with their clearer consciousness of right and wrong, less tendency to impulse, and a greater power to exert will, the fairer is physical punishment.

In the main I believe there is more "deserved" punishment among older children than among younger ones, yet the truth is not only the reverse, but a thousand times so. The punishment of small children is the commonest thing on earth. If we had a dollar in the treasury for every quick slap or shake the children get in a day we would surpass all the riches of India.

Rabid supporters of corporal punishment contend that children, being too young to reason with, know only one type of correction. Also they say that smarting skin is more wholesome than a smarting mind. I agree with them there, but the trouble is that the scar does not stay on the skin but on the mind. The mind is the acute victim of all physical punishment.

Questions for Parents

I dig up these questions for a purpose; will parents ask themselves these things:

"If Johnny were older would I correct him in another way than by using the hairbrush? Would I take the trouble to find out WHY he disobeyed? If he was merely careless or thoughtless, can I get results by talking to him as I would if he were eighteen? Why am I punishing him at nine for something I would never think of if he were older?"

I am not a champion of the argument system. We cannot enter into a debate every time children outlaw themselves. Neither must we threaten, for threatening is ignorant as well as useless. No, I believe there are times when corporal punishment is not a bad thing. With some children, of course, it is fatal, with others perhaps once in a lifetime is enough. But, yes—I shall have to confess that I believe it has its place under certain circumstances.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF.

By Alicia Hart

Don't let yourself get down in the dumps if a close-up of yourself discloses crows' feet about your eyes.

Those little lines should just be stamped out. The worst thing about them is the myth they have built up for themselves that they mean age. They may mean half a dozen other things, including fatigue, worry, bad vision, bad digestion, or even laugh lines.

Usually the only way to halt them is massage, with a nourishing cream. Some of them shouldn't be halted. If your eyes are the kind that crinkle up in merry manner like old Kris Kringle, when you laugh, then know that you probably will have tiny lines at the outside of your eyes very young and you shouldn't mind them. They're part of your gay character!

Massage Is Remedy

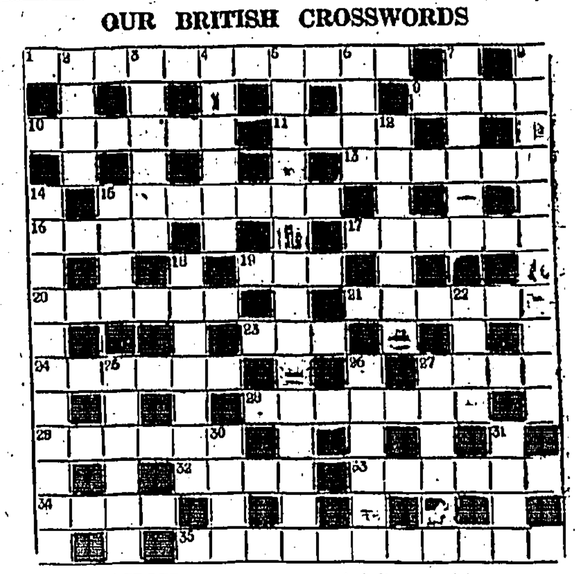

However, if you feel that the particular kind of crows' feet you have aren't in the least complimentary, then start in on them.

Massage one side of your face at a time. Hold your left second finger and thumb on your left cheek and temple, respectively, stretching the skin in between, while with your fingers of the other hand massage out from the eye, across the little lines. Use plenty of cream. Don't rub too hard. Rather smooth out the wrinkles often, a few strokes at a time.

Keep your skin moistened with good cream. As women get older, their skin tends to become dry. That is one reason why crows' feet and other wrinkles make inroads. Use cream night and morning and use a cream foundation before you put on your rouge and powder.

LOVE or MONEY?

BY H. W. CORLEY

CHAPTER XXIII

The Townsend limousine arrived at Lottie's apartment promptly at 10 o'clock. It remained there waiting until well after 11 because Mona and Lottie had set out at 9:30 to shop. On the list were shoes, hose, gloves, purse and even a rose-point handkerchief.

Lottie's suit, donned with much twirling and twisting before the mirror, had been pronounced exactly right for Mona. Both girls agreed that it was far better than a new one, hastily selected and not fitted properly.

Lottie selected a blouse to go with it. "You look simply adorable!" she told Mona as she tucked a stray lock carefully beneath the new blue hat. "That suit might have been made for you. It fits you exactly as well as it does me."

"It's sweet of you, Lottie, to take all this trouble—"

"No trouble at all, honey! I never dreamed I'd be lending my clothes to a bride for a swell wedding!"

"It isn't exactly the way I'd thought of marrying Barry," Mona said wistfully. "His uncle sending the car and me dashing out at the last minute to buy a bridal outfit."

Lottie smiled. "I know what you're thinking about," she said. "White satin—church aisles—Kitty and Kathleen tossing rose petals and your Ma weeping fit to kill—"

"Ma ought to be there, though," Mona said slowly. "I just can't understand it, Lottie. I mean this rush and everything."

"I know dear." Lottie's voice was sober. "The main thing is you're going to marry Barry."

She surveyed Mona approvingly, then dropped to her knees and busied herself with the hem of the skirt. "You say they're opening accounts for you," she went on, rising and scowling at the refractory hem. "And you're not even going to live at Twilands. Wonder why?"

"I'm to spend the year—or most of it except the hot months—at the town house," Mona repeated patiently.

"Learning to be a lady I suppose! Using the right fork. Which sauce to order with the fish. Learning to be a credit to the Townsend family—"

"Well, I've a lot to learn," observed Mona. "And I do want to be a credit to them!"

"What I mean is this," the other girl interrupted. "When you get back right after the ceremony you're going to find time heavy on your hands. No job, no house work. Just time to kill. Well, suppose we step out and buy your clothes together. Maybe I dress like a vamp myself but I know what the well-dressed young 63rd street wife should wear. That will take up part of your time. Of course I'll be as busy as a bee myself but I can get off now and then."

"Busy as which bee?" asked Mona, wrinkling her nose, her disturbing thoughts for a moment forgotten.

Lottie was wriggling into the sleeves of her coat. "The one that hangs around the hive and doesn't work, maybe," she answered. "Still, that's not fair, Min. I did work every day this week."

"And earned twice what they paid you," Mona said promptly.

"Do you have everything?" Lottie paused at the door to ask. "Take a last look at this place, Miss Moran. Maybe Mrs. Townsend won't be able to get here often."

"Don't be like that!" Mona's voice was distressed. "You know I'll always keep all my old friends."

Lottie slammed the door shut, tried to make sure of the lock and tossed the key into her purse.

It was a trim little bride whom Jackson, the chauffeur, saluted before he opened the door of the car with a low bow. Privately Jackson decided that the other young lady was decidedly attractive too. The chauffeur, thinking of his own happy but frowsy little wife back in the country, sighed.

The car glided up Seventh avenue to the park. "I've got an idea!" Lottie announced suddenly. Staying protests with a smoothly gloved hand, she leaned forward.

"Jackson," she called through the window which she had opened, ignoring the speaking tube. "Has Mr. Saccarelli's yellow roadster been at Twilands lately? He's a friend of mine. I thought maybe I'd see him to-day."

"The yellow roadster?" Jackson thought a moment. "Yes, miss. The yellow roadster was there yesterday. Not at the garage because Mr. Steve never bothers to drive to the garage. I saw the roadster last night parked by the hedge.

Lottie surveyed Mona triumphantly.

"Was it there this morning, Jackson? Is Mr. Steve staying over for the wedding? You've heard about the wedding, I suppose?"

Who indeed in the Townsend employ had not heard about the wedding? But Jackson reply was circumspect. "Begging your pardon, Miss, about the roadster I could not say. I left early to do some errands for Mr. Townsend."

"You didn't see it then beside the hedge this morning?"

Jackson smiled. "Mr. Steve used it last night. That's all I know. I saw him get into it when I drove the doctor to the station. That's the only time I saw it. Of course," apologetically, "Mr. Steve never parks it twice in the same place."

"And Twilands is full of parking places, isn't it?" offered Lottie. She was jubilant. This meant, of course, that Steve would be there. He'd be best man, most likely and she maid of honour—or whatever you could call it when the wedding takes place in a sick room.

They rode now in silence. The sun was shining and spring was in the air. A tender haze of green filled the distant fields and finally the dim outlines of Twilands raised above the sheltering branches across the valley.

Lottie craned her neck as the car entered the gate but failed to spy Steve's car.

"Listen, honey," she whispered as they drew up before the door, "if you want to back out right now I'm with you. Nobody on earth can make you go through with this if you don't want to—"

Jimmy appeared at the door, his face beaming. "Mr. Garretson will be down directly, Miss," he told Mona. "I wish you much happiness, Miss, if I may be so bold." He turned to the stairway and, bowing, pointed the way into the drawing room.

The room was empty. From a drawer in a table the butler drew out a package. It was a long, flat jeweller's box. "Mr. Steve asked me to give you this, Miss," he said. "Privately, Miss. He said you would understand."

"Mr. Steve!" Lottie exclaimed. "He's here?"

Jimmy shook his head. "No, Miss. He's gone. But he asked me to deliver the package before the wedding, Miss."

Lottie turned in dismay to Mona who stood with the open jewel case in her hand. It was the necklace and Mona had promised to wear it on her wedding day.

Mechanically she slipped the thin chain of diamonds about her neck and fastened the clasp.

"Gone?" Lottie repeated. "You mean Steve didn't want to stay for the wedding, Jimmy?"

"Hardly, I think, Miss. You see—"

Whatever Lottie was to see could not be explained at the moment. Mr. Garretson entered the room and, murmuring, the butler bowed himself out.

"Ah, Miss Moran!" Mr. Garretson was saying. "And I'm glad to know you, Miss Carr. You both look very charming."

"The gardener, sir, with the bouquet," Jimmy's voice came from the doorway.

The old gardener, hat in hand, shuffled forward to present an offering of delicate pink roses. "I've made every bridal bouquet for Twilands in 30 years," he said.

"It's beautiful. Thank you!"

"And you, Miss, if I may say so, are beautiful too."

Mr. Garretson turned to Mona approvingly. "The ceremony is to take place in the sick room," he said. "Townsend had a slight relapse last evening. Oh, nothing serious! But we thought it best not to allow him to rise. The doctor and nurse are there with the minister. Miss Lottie and I are to be the official witnesses."

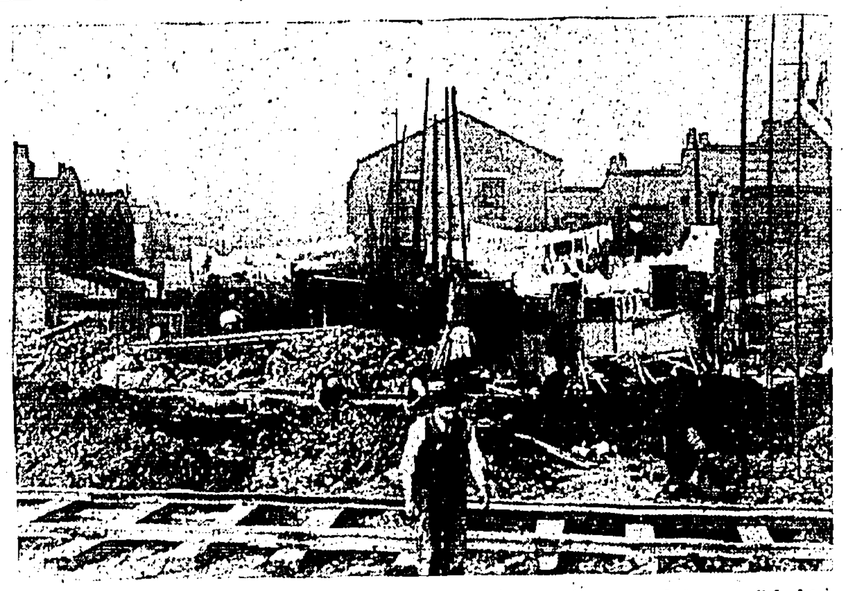

In silence they climbed the stairs. The staircase seemed interminable to Mona but they reached the top and moved down the dim, wide hall. Nearer and nearer to Barry's door. Which one would it be? Ah, here!

"Everything's ready, sir," a nurse whispered. She moved aside as Mona, large-eyed, clutching the roses, followed Mr. Garretson's gesture and stepped within.

If only they would give her one moment, just one, alone with him!

"Mr. Townsend has been very ill," the nurse said softly.

TIME after time he came back to her, but matters just became worse. Her gums lost their healthy pink, they receded and showed almost the very roots of her teeth. Her charming smile was vanishing.

She was afraid, and even ashamed to smile. Yet she continued her neglect. Her gums bled when she brushed her teeth, they hurt too. Now her teeth are loose. May soon fall out or have to be pulled out!

That is how ugly pyorrhea attacks the gums and undermines the entire system, spoiling natural beauty, sapping health, and vitality. Don't let it do this to you!

Protect your gums and teeth now, while they are sound. Every morning and night, brush your teeth with Forhan's for the Gums. It keeps them clean and white, and, when used regularly, prevents dread pyorrhea.

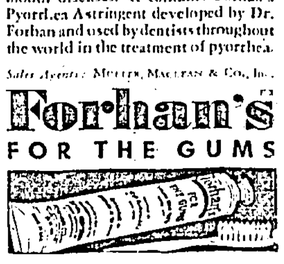

There is no substitute for fine gleaming teeth and firm pink gums, and there is no finer dentifrice to help safeguard your health, your beauty and your future happiness than Forhan's for the Gums.

same as that of the average star or the sun for instance. It dawns upon us now that this is the birth of the stars, born in one or two generations from the great nebulae. We have reached another great epoch in the history of the universe and in our journey from the beginning of things down to the present. We pause now on our way and gaze at one of those great nebulae with its children, or perhaps grand-children, the stars. The children and grand-children do not attempt to go away on their own and found new families but remain under the parental roof, so to speak. The great central part of the parent nebula still remains a wheel-like structure, luminous and unbroken while round its edges circle with it the swarm, great or small, of smaller nebulae or actual stars. It seems all to be happening before our eyes, much that we see we do not understand, some seems to be seen only as it were in a dream, but what we now relate is more or less what we see. It is just a rapid survey and though we are eager to scan more deeply into the mysterious becoming of things we are not able to satisfy fully our curiosity and conjecture helps us a lot. The mighty processes that are going before our eyes are, may be, too immense for our comprehension and the secret ways thereof too deep for our minds to penetrate. But we saw, or thought we saw, the great nebulae rising up from primeval chaos and from the nebulae we saw, or thought we saw, the stars come forth in their myrinds. In our own nebula or galactic system we saw, too, our sun being formed and revolving with its parent nebula and also rotating about an axis in itself but as yet we see no sign of the earth. As we have yet a very long distance to go on our journey down to the present we are not disappointed but hope to see later the epoch when our earth will arise out of this vast nebular island-universe system. In the mean time we have been watching some of those stars after their formation. Some are still gaseous but some have liquified and are still rotating. The gaseous ones flatten out and became lens-shaped and give off the gas that gets to the rim and it just clings round about them as a sort of atmosphere. The liquid ones are first of all globular in shape but as they go on rotating they flatten out orange-shaped, then cigar-shaped like an abnormally short thick cigar and then strange to say, the ends of the cigar thicken and the middle becomes like a neck, as the ends get thicker and more round the neck gets thinner and finally disappear altogether leaving two liquid balls of matter revolving round one another. So this is how double stars seem to have to be. No one has actually, by using a telescope, seen a star actually splitting up like that, but we certainly thought we saw it happening as we passed by one of those star-spangled nebula and we just leave it at that. Other stars we see remaining unbroken, giant stars and dwarf stars, that one is 90 million times the size of the sun but only about 40 times its weight: the smallest is about the size of the earth, only a millionth of the size of the sun. We see bright stars 300,000 times as bright as the sun, and faint stars, one of these only one fifty-thousandth of the sun's brightness. We see some stars now bright now faint, for ever varying with regular pulsations and others for ever dark. Some are enormously hot some comparatively cool, yet immensely hotter than our earth. Another remarkable star that we notice too is what is called "NOVA" or a new star. It is an ordinary star which for some unknown reason suddenly flushes out with a thousand times its ordinary brilliance and then fades away. We take particular notice of these stars for they set us thinking and thinking—about what we shall say later. Flying on and on downwards through the aeons of time, from epoch to epoch, we come to the time when the earth which was not begins to be. But before we relate our experiences of that event let us look at our clocks and see what they tell us of all ages, of all things. From all that we saw, we come to the conclusion that there is evidence that the matter now in the Universe was not there from all eternity but began to be at a very remote time. We had various clocks with us, they didn't all read the same time but they were more or less in agreement that matter cannot be more than 200 million million years old. It is not our purpose to record from our jottings by the way how the matter came to be, suffice it to say that we agree with astronomers that it wasn't there always. The ages of the star we could not find from any agreement of our clocks only we reckoned that they must have lived for some millions of millions of years but just how many we could not say—after all what is a million million years? Well who knows? And the age of the earth, well we are not so sure of that either. If every thing happened more or less as we saw or thought we saw it happening then we might make [illegible] guess by saying about 2,000,0[illegible] years. The epoch when life first [illegible]red on the earth also we could [illegible]rust our clocks to tell us accurately. We couldn't even have foretold when life should appear for we had not enough information to go upon. Nor could we tell if there is life anywhere else in the universe. None of the stars we see can have life on them as far as we know but whether there are among the stars other bodies like our earth with life upon them we couldn't tell. Thus briefly did we survey the universe from the present day back to its very infancy a superficial survey for it was a fabulously long distance flight. Our trip has been more awe-inspiring then when we just explored the vast spaces of the universe and the mystery of it all is more magnificent as we fly up to the source and fountain head of the great long river of time.

SPORT CRAZE IN LOCAL SCHOOLS

The cult of sport, slow to take a grip in the beginning, has emerged as a vitally important influence in Hongkong's educational establishments in the last two or three years. Every youth aspires to become an athlete, and he is not content to confine himself to any particular branch of sport; he is ready for them all. Intensive training, of a sort, goes on both in and out of school hours. Masters are appointed whose main duty is to cultivate the urge towards physical fitness. And who would challenge the need or, fundamentally, the desirability of encouraging this movement? Sport, properly directed, teaches strength, skill and chivalry. No-one would question the propositions that physical education has too long been neglected in Hongkong, that healthful exercise aids mental development and may go a long way to improving not only the physique but the moral outlook of the younger generation. But, and the qualification is very necessary, it is of prime importance that youth's enthusiasm should be directed into proper channels, that youth's attempts to attain proficiency are not obtained at too high a price. There is a growing body of opinion among those best able to study the growth of the cult of sport in local schools that the time has come when it should be taken under control. The prize-seeking spirit is too prevalent; more attention is paid to indulging the practice than instilling the nobility of athletics. Schoolboys, in many cases, it is suspected, are being forced beyond their powers by so-called sports masters who know nothing of training technique, not even enough to know that proper training alone enables athletic feats to be performed without undue strain, whose chief contribution appears to be the dosing of promising youngsters with Epsom Salts to keep their weight down. The result is seen all too frequently in Kowloon streets—a group of young Chinese in shorts and singlets, just about all-in, but still struggling along, having evidently undertaken a run in the evening over four or five miles in the ill-conceived belief that they are training, keeping themselves fit. Three times out of four it is definitely injurious to their health. Another development of this sport craze suggests that parents, too, are unaware that it can be indulged in to excess. We refer to its exploitation for advertisement. In some schools, special pains are taken to arrange the curriculum so that "organised sports" and physical exercises are always going on in full view of the street during the busiest hours of day, yet another encouraging bait for the bane of local education, the constant transfers of a boy from one school to another. The state of affairs is one requiring very serious attention. Obviously it does not apply to all educational institutions in equal measure. It might fairly be claimed for many that they are entirely free of the causes for criticism enumerated. It might also be argued that the situation is merely a passing phenomenon, that once the first fine careless rapture has worked itself off, schools and youths will settle down to sounder and more steady practice. But it needs careful watching.

Science's Quest for 'Truth'

If it has ever been felt that modern science has a self-satisfied air about the body of knowledge it has amassed, one might heed the words of Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Astronomical Observatory. Dr. Shapley predicts that "practically all current theories" are going to prove mortal before so very long. The axioms of today will be the abandoned and outgrown theories of to-morrow; and Dr. Shapley adds: "The only eternal verities at present are the enthusiasm back of hypotheses, the will to know and the willingness to fumble as we learn to know." This viewpoint, to be sure, is the general rule among scientists. But laymen often misunderstand it, and because they misunderstand it they sometimes resent what they feel is a too dogmatic and inflexible attitude on the part of science. A proper understanding of it might save us from a good deal of our creepy dread of the rising of scientific knowledge. For it seems, now and then, as if the scientists were banishing mystery from the world. It seems as if science were about to say: "Thus and so was the world made, and thus and so was man himself put together, and you can make your religion and your poetry and all of your dreams fit this framework or else you can discard them—it makes no difference, for this is the way things are." Now that manner of talk is liable to upset the equilibrium of any thoughtful man. But it is precisely the kind of talk that the real scientist does not indulge in. He is more likely to keep in mind Plato's great picture—A dim cave, with man chained facing the inner wall, speculating fruitlessly on the shadows cast on the wall by beings who walk against the sun in the open air. The highest "scientific truths," the greatest discoveries, are simply shadows. To-day's verities are to-morrow's discarded theories; there remains, as Dr. Shapley says, only "the will to know and the willingness to fumble as we learn to know."

Russia's Way and Our Own

One of the most interesting items of news from Russia is the announcement that the government is to adopt a stern attitude toward workers who fail to work as hard as the government thinks they ought. Recent legislation makes it possible for the government to deprive a workman and his family of a job, food and his house for a single day's unjustified absence from work. Lenin himself urged that the dictatorship of the proletariat must not hesitate to use force against the proletariat itself when the occasion requires it. And this odd contradiction emphasizes once more the strange and fascinating contrast between the things that are being attempted in Russia and the things that are being tried elsewhere. Basically, we are seeking the same goal. But how differently we are going at it! Iron discipline, a rigid regime in which the individual counts for nothing and freedom is a discarded word—these characterize the working-out of the Russian venture. We want the same things the Russians want, but we intend to get them in our own way. The individual worker may not be lord of the walk, in other countries, but he is absolute lord over his own life. Freedom, prosperity and happiness must begin with him if they are to mean anything.

INTO THE DAWN OF THE UNIVERSE

By REV. D. MacDONALD, S.J.

Once more we set out in our magic aeroplane. Last time we conquered space in that breathless dash and now we aspire to vanquish time. We audaciously determine to fly back into time, back into yesterday and the day before and through all the yesterdays that have been until maybe we reach the boundary of time beyond which there was no yesterday.

So off we hop and at once we see the history of mankind unfolding itself backwards, the dynasties of China that were rise up in reverse order before us again. Each beginning in defeat and disaster and ending in triumph where history books tell us they began. On and on we go, the days of Confucius flash past us, the prehistoric days become to us as new yesterdays as in our flight all things are reversed and effects come before causes, decay before prosperity, death before birth.

We have no mind to gaze into the maze of human history laid out before us in inverted sequence, interesting though it be, for we wish to go on. Spurning the land marks of history with thought-like wings we find ourselves in the twinkling of an eye out before the time when men began to be, out even before this very Earth itself began to be. Now the sun does not rise or set for there is no earth upon which to rise or set. And still we hurry on and we are before the sun was, but still the way is open before us, we see no painted signboard saying "Beyond this there is no way." As we travel we gaze at the star cities of our former trip, they seem to be not quite the same as before yet in general they haven't changed so very greatly, so we travel on and on through fabulous periods of time watching our nebulous star cities becoming more and more nebulous. And lo! finally we are before the birthdays of the nebulae and pause in amazement and awe at the dawn of the universe. We have undone all human history, all stellar history; we have even brought back the great nebular foundations of the universe into the shattered fragments of which they were built and pause at the threshold of Univeral history and gaze upon the scene of desolation that lies before us. What do we find there? A shattered universe, not like the shattered ruins of some earthly city, but a universe shattered and reshattered until the whole of space becomes a chaos of the ultimate ruins of all things that were. The solid Earth and planets, the stars liquid or gaseous, the great nebulae all as it were ground back almost to nothingness. Space seems absolutely void but no, the materials of the universe are still here, not solid, not liquid; but gaseous molecules the universal matter of which all things are made are there desolved back into a thin gaseous substance. And the whole space of the universe is filled with that tenuous gas. And the gas is so thinly distributed that each molecule stands apart from its neighbours by a couple of feet whereas in ordinary air the molecules are only at about the distance of 1/8,000,000th of an inch apart. We are in primeval chaos before all things were that are. This primeval gas that now fills all space so thinly is perfectly uniformly distriubted, no little heaps here and there and no empty pockets but everywhere just the same. All is still. No movement, nothing like winds or weather depressions but just perfectly balanced stillness. The stillness of chaos, not of the chaos of disorder but the chaos of a yet unbuilt universe. We have arrived at our destination and now we set forth on our homeward journey. And lo, just as we start some great tremor passes through the length and breadth and depth of chaotic space and the whole face of the universe begins to change. The gaseous substance that was so uniformly distributed now disturbed in its balance begins to break up into immense masses of gas leaving regions empty or almost empty. The gaseous molecules mutually attract one another and from the outskirts of those immense masses of gas the molecules are sucked into that mass by its powerful attraction, in fact the gaseous mass becomes more and more compact and the empty spaces more and more empty. Very many of these immense masses of gas are now to be seen occupying at intervals the space that was before chaos, just like big globe shaped clouds. There is a great pressure within these great masses tending to make them burst up and shatter and go back the the original state of chaos but the greatness of their masses makes the force of suction, so to speak, by which everything is drawn or attracted towards the centre of the mass, powerful enough to prevent the mass breaking up, nay even powerful enough to make it contract and contract continuously. In some of these masses, as we watch them developing the suction is exactly towards the centre and these just become great big balls, so to speak of gas of fabulous size and weight. In others the rush of the gas does not go radially but gets a slight twist (we didn't just quite perceive how it got the twist) and so the whole mass starts off with a spinning top movement, i.e. the whole mass starts off like a sort of revolving ball of gas. We didn't see how that initial tremor came about that set everything agog, nor did we see who or what started it nor why it started, but somehow we got the idea that there was a tremor that woke up the universe from its slumbers and made it begin the work of its long day. The big masses that thus start their career revolving like great spinning-tops are to us more interesting than the others, for the others just don't do anything but wait, I suppose, for someone to give them a shove to wake them up, so we ignored them. The others contracting and revolving at the same time catch our interest because we see that as they get smaller and smaller, while yet of course immense in size, they revolved more and more rapidly. We estimate the masses of these big gas clouds, and, strange to say, their masses are just more or less the masses of the great star or nebulae of our first universal flight. Then the fact dawn upon us that these great gaseous masses that have just been born out of chaos are those very nebulae that we spoke of, but yet in their swaddling clothes of infancy. We notice that they do not all revolve with the same rapidity. We also notice that while in the beginning they were like immense globes, as time went on owing to there ever increasing speed of revolution they become more and more flattened, first like an orange, then like a thick, bulging lens and then like a thin lens, with an edge of gas very uniformly distributed at the rim. This rim gas now resembles in its uniformity the gas of primeval chaos only that it isn't nearly so thin, and as we contemplate it, lo, a tremor as before shivers it and it begins to form new and smaller nebular bodies. These new nebulae of the second generation still keep in the neighbourhood of their great parent nebulae and revolve with them while also revolving themselves like a wheel and similarly like their parents in their own good time they give off a colony of gaseous masses of the third generation. These later, and in fact some of the second generation nebulae, we find to have a mass more or less about the

"They don't think of nothin' but fashions! Why can't women be like us men, and all dress the same?"

The Very Idea!

THIS HIKING EVIL

By Eddie Kelly, Tramp.

"FOR the Love of Hike!"

Greater hate hath no respectable reporter than he who, at the stern command of a cornless Editor, meekly puts on his squeaky wenders, shovels a handful of dog biscuits into his pocket, and wends on a compulsory hike.

"The pikers—pardon! hikers—are out," said the Ed. to Eddie, "Go get the news."

Time was when the only hikers in the land were young women walking back after a little difference of opinion with a motoring boy friend.

But now it's different. Take yesterday, for instance.

The birds, hardly realising that Summer was here, were twittering in the trees, the sun was shining, and old man Kelly's son was dressed in the latest in hikerle.

It was just the kind of Sunday morning, when good men's thoughts turn to Hymns, and bad men's thoughts turn to "Hers".

Under ordinary circumstances, we would have been bowling along in Matilda (Matilda is our car, you know!) with one of the girl friends by our side, sneering at the fool hikers cluttering up the roadway.

Instead of which, obeying the stern call to duty, we hobbled painfully out to Taipo, cursing the thoughtless motorists who wanted the whole of the road.

We thought it was going to be no end of a hike. By 3 p.m. we thought there was going to be no end to the hike.

We were so burned up we felt like a fuel.

We were unlucky, too. After leaving the Peninsula Hotel, we had to walk about two miles past Nathan Road before we could find a motorist who would give us a lift out to Taipo.

We managed to stagger out of his car when we arrived there, and were just in time to wheeze our way along to the railway station and catch the last train back into town.

We met the girl friend at the Kowloon station.

"Have you been hiking?" she asked sweetly.

"In every joint!" we replied feebly.

YOUNG EDDY ON POLITICS.

Daddy (he calls us that), didn't you say $197,000 for new Government offices was charity?

You shouldn't listen when we're addressing your mother, son.

But what did you mean by charity, daddy?

If you must know, my boy, we doubted whether market value was calculated in the purchase of the old Sailor's Home and supposed that the Government was helping on the good work at the expense of Poor Old Taxpayer.

But can't he protest, daddy?

Look here, son, don't be a worry.

But, daddy, when the Government spends all that money don't they have to ask for a Vote or something?

Yes, my boy, a meeting of the Finance Committee is held. Our Unofficial members of Council attend, the vote is approved and the money is spent, unless it happens to be Public Works Extraordinary. Then you never know.

Is this public work extraordinary, daddy?

Well, strictly speaking, no.

Will they spend the money then, daddy?

Of course, my son.

Why didn't the Unauspicious protest, dady?

Unofficials, son. Un-O-Fish-awls. My dear boy, you must not expect me to be omniscient.

Sez you!

You'd better go to bed my lad if you're going to be cheeky.

But daddy, the Unauspicious asked questions about a thousand dollars being spent on digging up some old pots and pans, why didn't they ask about the Sailor's Home?

Embarrassing questions are not encouraged at Council meetings, my son.

What are embarrassing questions, daddy?

And that is how Edward Kelly Junior came to take his supper standing up.

Which reminds us that Dr. Shrubsall, addressing the Child Study Society recently, said that the child which in a temper bites an adult should be bitten back, not slapped.

But he did not say what course of action should be taken when an adult bites a child.

RESERVIST LOSES REVOLVER

"SPECTATOR'S" COUP IN TERRITORIES

A strange story of how a Chinese Police Reservist when out target-shooting in the New Territories yesterday with a friend, was dispossessed of his service revolver in addition to a rifle, is being related in Police circles.

The two men concerned were Wong Woon-man, Chinese Police Reservist No. 34, and Wong Waiching. The former carried his service revolver which was not loaded and the latter had a .22 calibre Remington target rifle which he was teaching his friend to use.

They were engrossed in their occupation when, it is related, three other Chinese appeared on the scene and paid what was then assumed to be a polite attention to the proceedings.

One of the three, seemingly anxious not to miss anything, squatted close to the Police Reservist and after a little while asked if the rifle then held by the Police Reservist could shoot birds!

Wong Woon-man deigned no reply, but immediately the revolver was seized. The owner had left it lying on the ground. At the same time the man produced a dagger, which he brandished ferociously. His companions similarly armed then took away the rifle. Before they left, the robbers also took Wong Waiching's gold watch and chain.

ALLEGED BREACH OF COVENANT

JUDGMENT RESERVED

In a case at the Supreme Court this morning before Mr. Justice Lindsell, involving alleged breach of covenant, judgment was reserved following an argument as to whether the action was premature.

The claim was for the return of $1,000 deposited as security for payment of rent by Hui Sai-hoi, of 51, Water Street, against Chan Lai-wan and Wong Leung-shi, both of the See Long Firm, of 28, Bonham Strand East.

Mr. P. H. Sin was for the plaintiff and Mr. F. C. E. Rendall for the defendants.

By lease dated November 13, 1928, defendants demised certain property to plaintiff for a term of five Chinese years and defendants thereby covenanted to return to plaintiff the sum of $1,000 deposited with them as security for rent, and to pay interest on the deposit at the rate of $1,000 per Chinese month. During the term a person named Fung Shuk-tuen lawfully claimed the premises through and under defendants and, as assignee, in 1931 refused to pay interest on the deposit under the lease.

Mr. Sin stated that the question for the decision of the Court was whether or not the quiet enjoyment of the premises had been interupted. The covenant was a personal one and the original contracting party was the one to whom the plaintiffs looked for payment, namely the defendant.

Mr. Rendall pointed out that the case seemed to be affected by the conveyance law as it existed before the conveyancing act of 1881 as there was no conveyance of property act in the Colony. There was no evidence in the case to show that the mortgagees would not be privy to the lease. If the covenant was a personal one he would say there had been novation. It was obvious that no action lay against the defendant at all.

Mr. Sin contended that the contract concerned land or interest in land and that writing was essential, therefore in the absence of any writing it was not feasible for the Court to infer there was novation.

His Lordship reserved judgment.

DESERVING OF COMMENDATION

SMART ARREST OF A THIEF

"I think D.W. 119 should earn a commendation, said Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Magistracy this morning, when he sent a Chinese to gaol for four months for stealing a wrist watch.

The District Watchman said he saw defendant shadowing complainant. Accused held a felt hat in his left hand, and with his right hand extracted the watch and placed it in his hat. When arrested, the watch was found in the hat. Complainant, informed of the theft, identified the article.

FOOCHOW FEARS

DEMONSTRATION BY JAPANESE?

Foochow, May 3.

Bishop Ding Ing-ong (Chen Yung-En) who was captured by bandits on 25th March near Shanyang, has been released and has returned to Foochow. He says he was well treated (according to bandit standards) and he does not appear to have suffered any serious injury from his four weeks captivity, but still it must have been a great strain upon him, as he is not a young man. Immediately after being released, he went on with the work which had been interrupted by his capture, namely the visiting of several villages and performing the rite of confirmation.

Banditry is still very prevalent in many places, and it is not easy to see an early end to it. There is still considerable unrest in the Northwest, but it is said to be due to "local communists," i.e. not part of the big Communist Army which still holds part of Kiangsi and western Fukien.

In some quarters there has for some time been a sense of apprehension, lest the Japanese should feel called upon to make a demonstration in Fukien. When eight American gunboats arrived at Pagoda Anchorage a couple of weeks ago, the rumour began to spread that the expected was about to happen, as they were taken by some people to be Japanese. These gunboats only stayed a few days, and have now gone up north. It is devoutly to be hoped that there is no ground for any of these rumours, and that Foochow may continue to hold its good reputation for peace and quiet.

I understand that Kulinang, the summer resort a few miles from Foochow, is likely to be filled to overflowing this coming summer. It is possible that the new motor road from Pagoda Anchorage will soon be finished, and that will eliminate many inconvenient delays for visitors.—Our Own Correspondent.

Following numerous complaints by residents, Inspector Hynes raided the ground floor of No. 567 Nathan Road yesterday morning and arrested a woman named Cheung So for keeping an improper house. When brought before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, she denied the charge, but after hearing the evidence, the Magistrate convicted and imposed a fine of $50 or one month.

The 14th annual Sunday School festival was held at St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, the preacher at both the morning and evening services being the Vicar, Rev. W. Walton Rogers. Offerings will be devoted to the work of Dr. Barnardo's Homes. On Saturday afternoon the Sunday School pupils were entertained by the teachers and a most enjoyable time was spent. Tea was served, following which sports were held and a cinematograph show given in the Church Hall. Prizes won during the year for regular attendance were also awarded.

"Put him on the report" said Mr. Wynne-Jones when an Indian Police Sergeant failed to appear before him as complainant against a Chinese charged with a minor offence. It was mentioned that the Sergeant was in hospital. "He is not sick, officially, as far as I know" said Sergeant D. Reidy.

Refusal to obey orders to remove furniture resulted in a fight between a sub-contractor, and two coolies in Robinson Road yesterday. Police came on the scene and arrested the combatants, who all suffered minor injuries. Brought before Mr. Schofield this morning, the defendants were cautioned and bound over to keep the peace.

A joint recital was given by Lydia Michel, vocalist, and Norda Mata, Danseuse Moderne, on Friday in the Swasey Hall at Lingnan University. The Recital was extremely well attended about 500 people being present, mostly Chinese which shows the interest that the youth of China is now taking in modern European music and dancing. The artists were greatly appreciated and encored several times. A similar recital which was also very well received and did much to advertise this one was given on the preceding day in the Canton Club, and was well attended.

COUNTERFEIT COINS

BOY REMANDED ON CHARGE

A Shanghai Chinese, said to be a wharf sleeper, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Court this morning charged with the possession of 99 ten cents and 399 five cents counterfeit coins at the Macao wharf.

Examining the coins, the Magistrate remarked their weight was bad, but their appearance was the best he had seen.

Det-Sergeant. Macdonald said the defendant had the coins in a parcel concealed. He told the Police he has been paid 30 cents to carry them to a man whom he was to meet. "The employment of boys as carriers is a new method" he said.

The Sergeant added that in a recent case in England, Mr. Justice Whitney granted a remand of 48 hours, in order to find the man who gave the prisoner the proceeds of the spoil, as his Lordship considered it was of vital importance. A remand in the present case, might have vital consequences.

His Worship—I was going to suggest a remand. (To defendant) —You either did this quite innocently or well knowing what you were doing. You say you are perfectly innocent. It it the duty of all good little boys to assist the Police. We are giving you forty-eight hours in which to do so.

Defendant—I cannot find the man.

His Worship—I will talk to you about that the day after to-morrow.

BEAN CAKE TRADE.

KILLED BY BOYCOTT AND DEPRESSION

Dairen, May 7.

Statistics reveal that the export of bean cakes from Manchuria has been severely affected by the depression in Japan and the anti-Japanese boycott in South China.

The number of bean cakes shipped from Dairen in April totalled 988,900, showing a decline of fully 1,900,000 when compared with the figure for April last year.

Only 15 bean cake factories are now working, compared with 35 a year ago.—Reuter Special.

LAWN BOWLS FIREWORKS BY THE POLICE

"DARK HORSE" TEAM REVEALS FORM

Only a few weeks ago, when these columns were reviewing the prospects of lawn bowls clubs, it was darkly hinted that from the Police first team this summer, might afford some of the biggest surprises of the year.

The hint has become a reality. The Police started their fireworks on Saturday, and they had the temerity to initiate the display at the expense of Craigengower, the league champions.

"Last year", said a P.R.C. enthusiast the other day, "we lost by only four shots to the Craigengower on their own green. This year we shall beat them." And they did.

It was a magnificent achievement. Furthermore it was no touch and go affair. Eighteen shots separated the teams at the close, and this gives a indication, better than the actual result, of the potentialities of the Police team..

And there were two or three other outstanding performances, among them being the K.C. C.'s succesful visit to Taikoo and the victory of the Peninsula club's second string over the redoubtable Recreio, who the previous Saturday had trounced the Police by the bare 50 shots.

Then again there was the achievement of the Craigengower reserves in going over to the Civil Service green and trouncing the Government bowlers by a margin of 25 shots and the fine away win of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club at the expense of the Indians.

Robbed of Governor's Cup by F.A. Eleven

"SONNY" BLISS AT HIS BEST

CHINESE MISS INSPIRATION OF S. CHINA FORWARDS

(By "Veritas")

IT is rare thing to see a local Chinese football team outplayed and beaten by a definitely superior side, but such was the spectacle afforded the onlookers at the Club ground on Saturday, when the Hongkong Football Association XI defeated the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation selected side by two goals to nil for possession of the Governor's Cup.

And this game drove home another truth. Take away Ip Pak-wa, Fung King-cheung, Tam Kong-pak and Cheng Shui-hong, and a representative Chinese team is like a car without gasoline.

Up to the forward line, the C.A.A.F. eleven was composed of the same players who have accomplished such doughty things for South China this season. Beyond was Wong Mee-shun and Mak Sui-hon, two normally brilliant forwards. Yet without the assistance of Fung, Ip and Cheng, they were completely impotent and the team as a whole suffered a reaction worthy of the description "extraordinary".

Granted the Chinese had to battle through the last half an hour with only nine men, two of the forwards being incapacitated, but so completely had they been subdued by the F.A. defence, that even if they had remained at full strength throughout, defeat would not have been averted.

The Chinese suffered chiefly through inefficient wingers, and inside men who would not, or could not, give Wong Mee-shun the type of passes which he must have if he is to score goals.

The defeat of the Chinese boils down to this. All credit must be given to the European rearguard for the exceptionally smart way they went about their work gaining the upper hand, but it is pretty certain that they would not have enjoyed quite as much success against a more capable set of forwards.

DISEASE SPREADS.

Eventually this inferiority which marked the forward line from the opening minutes of the game spread itself to the rest of the team and we had the unusual sight of seeing master tacticians such as Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang making palpable blunders in tackling, clearing and covering, whilst Leung Wing-chui lost all sense of direction in passing and most of his heart and enthusiasm in defending.

For the first time this season Lim Thin-chan, the South China custodian, was seen in active action, and he undoubtedly saved the team from a bigger defeat, although it must be conceded that he had the luck on his side on more than one occasion.

Wong's loneliness in the forward line was almost pitiful. He strove hard to outwit Mullane and Co., but when best placed for an individual effort, ruined everything by indulging in tactics which invited the displeasure of the referee and the usual penalty.

Mak Sui-hon, the Athletic forward, was extremely disappointing, and apart from missing an open goal before the F.A. scored their second point, showed little idea of constructive forward play and was sadly in error with his passes and in shooting.

THE ONLY FAIR RESULT.

The Football Association XI were far and away the better team. Any other result but victory would have been an insult to them. They were worth more than two goals.

The splendid work of the defence and half backs paved the way to success, and the forwards, deriving inspiration from their colleagues, maintained a pressure and a sympathetic collaboration which eventually broke down even the brilliant obstructive play of Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang.

Mullane and Sonny Bliss earned the honours in the rear division. Both touched absolutely top form, and frankly this was the finest game I have seen from Bliss for many a long day.

Ash, a little unhappy, slightly nervous at first, eventually settled down to a sound understanding with Mullane, and so well did they cover each other that Combey had a very quiet afternoon. What he had to do, he did well and with his customary expediency.

Playing their part in an intermediate trio which defied subjection, Pardoe and Andy Duncan worked strenuously and were practically always on top.

BRILLIANT BRYANT.

Bryant, brought in at the last minute through the absence of Cosano was the finest forward on

CHINESE ATHLETIC TAKE REVENGE

WEAK NAVY SIDE OUTPLAYED: KOWLOON SURPRISE THE POLICE

LACKING the services of Shirras, and James in defence, and the whole of their usual forward line, Warne, Davies, Langmead, McPhee and Cormack, the Navy offered poor opposition to the Chinese Athletic in the return league match yesterday and were well beaten 5-2.

* * *

THE football was of the poorest type, although the Athletic were value for the points. The game served as a reminder that the standard of football in the first division this season has shown a definite decline.

* * *

AS expected, South China defeated the Artillery in a charity match at Caroline Hill, scoring twice without reply.

THE Police had only themselves to blame that they conceded both, or any points, to Kowloon on Saturday. They had twice as many chances to score, not to mention a penalty, and they just ignored them. The familiarity of the ball in the Kowloon goal area enjoyed by the Police appeared to breed nothing but contempt, and when the homesters seized their three real goal-scoring chances, the result was as to be expected under the circumstances.

* * *

THE Engineers had no right to lose a point to South China in the Third Division. They outplayed their opponents in the second half, but finished wretchedly. By the same token the Chinese made an awful hash of one golden opportunity in the closing stages, but taking the game in general perspective, the soldiers should have won.

the field. He scored a magnificent goal, and deserved a couple more. He really had Lau Mau puzzled, which in itself is no mean achievement, and his dashing display did much to crack up the Chinese defence.

Purkins led the line with an energy which he seemed to accumulate as the match progressed, and although he could have used a little more discretion and steadiness in front of goal with more profitable results, the fact that he was a thorn in the side of the opposition made his presence valuable to the winners.

Ridley contented himself with scheming, and badly supported as he was by Brennan on the left wing, was not given a fair chance to reveal his best form.

Baldry displayed a big improvement on the right wing, and fell quickly into line with Bryant's movements, so that it was this wing which caused the greatest anxiety to the Chinese.

NO FANCY STUFF.

The football as a whole was entertaining even if it did lack the distinctive features of cleverness which usually characterises the appearances of the Chinese teams. The Europeans had little time for fancy work and made the most direct route for goal in the shortest time possible, while the Chinese endeavours to introduce intricate passing movements and were so poor that the opposition defence found little difficulty in ruining them.

This defeat prevented the Chinese from sweeping the trophy board for this season. They had already annexed the Senior Shield, Lai Wah Cup and Charity Cup, not to mention the Second Division League championship, and, it is pretty certain, eventually the First Division title.

But the Association's victory was well merited and they deserve to enjoy the distinction of being the first winners of the handsome Governor's Cup, which His Excellency personally presented after keenly following the whole game.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES.

Every spring hundreds of sign-painters start out from Chicago or New Orleans, and busily cover the country side with their displays. It is a field of endeavour that motion pictures have heretofore overlooked, but it forms the background of "Face in the Sky", the Fox picture to be seen at the King's Theatre next Thursday.

Dealing with a unique type of romance between a travelling sign artist and a country girl, and directed by Harry Lachman, the noted European-trained director, the picture is heralded as a great success.

Spencer Tracy, Marian Nixon and Stuart Erwin have the leading roles and the cast includes Sarah Padden and Sam Hardy. Myles Connolly wrote the original story and Humphrey Pearson the screen play, with William Collier, handling the dialogue direction.

"Payment Deferred"

"Payment Deferred," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of the well-known mystery play, comes to the Queen's screen on Thursday, with the celebrated English actor, Charles Laughton, repeating the role he made famous both in London and on Broadway.

The play, which deals with a unique treatment of a murderer and his crime, is an adaptation of C.S. Forester's novel, one of the best-sellers among mystery stories, and was first presented in London, where it created a sensation with Laughton's performance hailed as one of the artistic successes of the year. Later its triumph was repeated in New York.

A distinguished cast appears with Laughton, including Maureen O'Sullivan, Dorothy Peterson, Verree Teasdale, Ray Milland, Billy Bevan, Halliwell Hobbs and William Stack. The picture was filmed under the direction of Lothar Mendes, who previously directed "Interference" and "Convoy."

The story of "Payment Deferred" concerns a London bank clerk who, desperate for money, murders a rich nephew, hides the body and makes a fortune with funds stolen from the boy. He and his wife share the guilty secret, which at first haunts the murderer day and night, but which is gradually erased by time.

Later, however, the bank clerk becomes enmeshed with a blackmailing woman and his wife, in despair, takes poison. Circumstantial evidence points to him as the murderer and thus, through a trick of fate, he pays for a crime of which he is innocent while his real crime goes undiscovered.

Among the dramatic thrills are the gripping moment when the clerk realizes that he is about to become a murderer; the discovery of the crime by his wife, and the amazing denouement in which the criminal is trapped despite the fact that he is innocent.

French Talkie to be Shown

After much publicity, a French film of Parisian footlights will be shown at The Central Theatre next Wednesday. The title is "Paris-Beguin", or "Paris Caprice" and is an Osso Film presentation, starring the celebrated French stage actress, Jane Marnac, and Jean Brabin.

Although the dialogue is entirely in French, there are English subtitles giving the main points of the dialogue at the foot of the screen as the action proceeds; but so consummate is the acting of the French artists, that words are really unnecessary. The setting of the film is distinctly novel; it is a story of Parisian stage-life, in which the heroine is faced with the ordeal of playing behind the footlights a tragedy of love, the counterpart of which she has actually experienced a drama which, when she read the acting script, she thought too impossible ever to occur in life.

The whole atmosphere of the setting is true to French theatrical life, and the story itself, no less than the acting, true to life itself. The picture should not be missed by any who have longed to know something of this aspect of the "Gay Capitol."

"Mr. Robinson Crusoe"

The arrival at Papeete of the Douglas Fairbanks company and the chartered yacht, Invader, to film "Mr. Robinson Crusoe", showing at the King's Theatre, was the signal for a reception and jollification such as has never been exceeded in the South Seas.

The Invader, besides appearing in the picture, served as a sea-going studio for "Doug" during his stay in the South Seas, carried four monkeys and two parrots, a load of dynamite and other explosives.

"Doug" was welcomed to the islands by Governor General Jore on behalf of the French Government, and an immediate bombardment of receptions began featuring wild pig feasts and native dances, attended by tribal rulers and South Sea belles.

In return for this hospitality, Fairbanks gave the natives their first view of talking motion pictures. With special equipment taken with him, Doug staged a show for the benefit of the Pierre Loti Memorial, offering as the feature attractions "Mickey Mouse" and "Around the World in Eighty Minutes."

"Hot Pepper"

Flagg and Quirt, the militant Marines, have exchanged their uniforms for silk hats and full dress clothes. They appear in the Fox comedy, "Hot Pepper", dressed in the height of fashion and living like kings in their roles as night club owners. The production comes to the King's Theatre very shortly.

Preserving the spirit of the characters of Flagg and Quirt, originated by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, they continue to battle over women and particularly over "Pepper", an impetuous and fiery little stowaway from South America found on one of Flagg's rum ships.

Edmund Lowe again appears as Quirt and Victor McLaglen as Flagg. The role of "Pepper" is enacted by the vibrant and dynamic Lupe Velez. El Brendel, the Swedish dialect comedian, plays a featured role and others in prominent parts are Lilian Bond, Boothe Howard, Gloria Roy and Russ Clark. Much colour is said to be added to the night club scenes by a singing and dancing chorus with which Miss Velez appears in a dance number.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

RESERVOIRS SHOW FALL OF LEVELS

The Water Return for April notes that the rainfall for the month as recorded at the Royal Observatory was only 3.510 inches as compared with 8.435 inches during April last year.

As the result of very dry winter and spring, further restrictions on supply have been imposed on the island. This year during April there was only a ten hour daily supply in two periods. In April 1932, the supply was full except that the rider main district supply was through the street fountains. In Kowloon this year there were the same restrictions. In April last year Kowloon had a full supply.

The island reservoirs at the end of April were well below overflow —Tytam Tuk no less than 60 ft. 8 ins. below, and less than a quarter full. The total in storage on the island on April 30 was 672.59 million gallons, compared with 710.15 on the same date last year. In Kowloon there were 255.24 million gallons stored, compared with 212.06 last year.

The Hongkong consumption for the month was 250.67 million gallons (248.20 in April last year). Of this total, 4.03 million gallons came from Kowloon by pipe line. With an estimated population of 385,750 the Hongkong consumption was 21.7 gals. per head per day (21.6 last April).

The Kowloon consumption was 141.52 million gallons (15.1 gals. per day on an estimated population of 312,600) compared with 152.24 million gallons (17 gals per head per day) in April 1932.

LOVE OR MONEY?

The sick man, lying back on his pillows, opened his eyes. It was not Barry. Mona understood it all in a flash! It was Barry's uncle—the tall, slender man who had been lunching with Mr. Garretson at the Savarin!

The stern eyes, opening, held the girl's for a long moment. "Miss Moran?" he said. "Thank you for coming. I'm sorry my rascally nephew can't be here to witness our marriage. He insisted on sailing for South America last night."

THE EMPIRE FAIR

DAILY BROADCAST OF NEWS

Exhibitors and intending visitors to the British Empire Fair 1933, to be held at Kowloon on May 24 and the three following days, will be interested to learn that by permission of the chairman and members of the Broadcasting Committee, short daily announcements will be made from the Studio at the luncheon hour and again in the evening. These announcements will be compiled by an experienced member of the Fair Committee who is well acquainted with the progress of the arrangements from day to day. The announcements are both informative and interesting, and will be well worth while listening to, if only to follow the urge of curiosity to ascertain what is being done in the way of organising the Fair, and what to expect in the numerous displays which exhibitors will present in the opening day and that will remain on view during the remaining days of the Fair.

The selection of the news items for the first announcement made from the Broadcasting Studio will give readers of the S. C. M. Post an idea of what listeners-in may expect by way of information. For example, the fact was made public that the chairman and committee of the Fair have issued an official invitation for the Fair, the opening ceremony of which will be performed at the Peninsula Hotel by His Excellency the Governor at noon on Wednesday, May 24, Empire Day. There will be an official luncheon following the opening ceremony.

Last Friday evening's broadcast announcement which, by the way, was the first of the series, fittingly epitomised the exhibits that will be staged by the Taikoo Dockyard and Engineering Co. of Hongkong, Ltd. The list was followed by a comprehensive outline of the famous dockyard at Quarry Bay, describing in brief its lay-out, equipment and capabilities, and the most important materials used in the building and repairing of ships at Taikoo. If Friday's announcement can be accepted as a specimen of what will be issued by the Fair Committee as news announcements concerning the Fair, there can be no doubt that thousands of Hongkong listeners and many more thousands on the South China Coast and in adjacent Treaty ports will await the daily broadcast short talks on the Fair with pleasure and interest.

Firms Dealt With.

Firms and public utility concerns such as the Hongkong Electric Co., the China Light and Power Co., the Hongkong Telephone Co., to mention a few out of a long list of enthusiastic supporters of the Fair, will be dealt with, in the course of a survey of the important part they are taking and their practical, substantial contributions to make the Empire Day Fair a success.

No compulsory fee for space has been asked from exhibitors, nor will there be any charge for admission to the Fair. Indeed, in the case of the peasantry of the New Territories, the committee is making arrangements with the Railway authorities and the transport companies for free tickets for the farmers travelling from the outlying districts to the Fair at Kowloon. The Peninsula Hotel is the venue, and the large pavilion on the opposite side on Nathan Road will house a collection of motor-cars, lorries and trucks of British production, besides machinery in motion and British products generally, never before presented in Hongkong under a single roof.

THE FOLLY OF WAR.

DEBATE AMONG WAH YAN COLLEGE STUDENTS

A most interesting debate on War was held on Saturday in the College Hall of Wah Yan College. The subject was worded thus: "That War is an unwise and inefficient way of settling international disputes."

A number of excellent speeches were delivered on either side, and the division at the end showed how evenly the house was divided.

The speakers on the Government side laid emphasis on the waste of warfare, on the famine and suffering which it brings in its wake, on the folly of fighting, as a means of deciding questions of right and wrong, and on the fact that war never really settles any issue, but merely stores up vindictiveness and hatred for future generations.

For the Opposition the chief points made were that this is not an ideal, but a very imperfect world, and that frequently the only course left to the nation on the defensive is to take up arms in her own defence; and that war, terrible though it be, brings out much that is fine in human character, heroism, loyalty, unselfishness.

Some points from the speeches were:

"War brings desolation to fruitful lands; it causes remorse and suffering even when carried on under the most favourable conditions. War means loss and waste. It seems to turn the tide of progress backwards, and undo the advance of years. And the evils of war do not end with the war itself. In its aftermath come famine and unemployment."

"Times of peace tend to lead men to sloth and indolence and selfishness, whereas war breeds a race of heroes. War may be a destroyer, but civilization has often followed in its wake."

"War is only adopted by unreasonable savages, to whom arbitration is unknown. Two coolies may settle their differences with knives; but that is hardly the method of civilized and educated gentlemen."

"Is anything better than war for its purpose? Has peace, can peace, ever settle international disputes?"

"Would you have a small brother fight his big brother for his fair share of cakes?"

"War teaches people to be cruel, selfish and callous, instead of producing heroism and unselfishness. The stronger always wins, hence war is entirely futile as a means of deciding questions of right and justice. Further, the defeated country is never at rest, till she obtains her revenge. Countries have learned enmities through war, and these enmities have lasted from generation to generation; cf, France and Germany, Japan and China.

"The great men of all ages have been anti-war. The reason is because its effects are not lasting; it effects a temporary, and frequently unjust peace, but leaves the combatants crippled for generations, and in the hearts of their citizens hatred and revenge."

The division at the end resulted in 15 votes for the Government, and 15 for the Opposition. The motion was left undecided.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Do the good players, who are successful in winning championships, always strictly adhere to the system they are playing? I think the answer given by Willard S. Karn of New York, one of the five outstanding bridge players of the world, to this question is worth repeating.

He said, "Does a good football team play mechanical football?" He further asked, "When the signals are given for a certain play, and the ball-carrier suddenly realizes that the defence has the hole plugged, but sees another opening on the other side of the field—isn't it good football for him to dodge through this weak spot and gain five or ten yards?"

And so, he says, it is in contract. Bid with your partner, but at times, when you are opening, have the courage to do the unusual.

He gives the following hand which he played recently in a New York tournament as an example.

	♠A-Q-9-3 ♥9-8-7-4-2 ♦7 ♣8-6-3
♠J-10-6-2 ♥A-K-10 ♦K-8 ♣A-K-7-2	♠K-7 ♥Q ♦A-Q-J-10-9-5-2 ♣Q-J-5
	♠8-5-4 ♥J-6-5-3 ♦6-4-3 ♣10-9-4

NORTH / WEST / EAST / Dealer SOUTH — 23

The Bidding

Mr. Karn sat in the North. His partner in the South was the dealer and passed. West bid one club. Mr. Karn knew that the West player in this particular hand did not open on weak first or second hand bids. With a pass from his partner, he reasoned that possibly top score on the board would be no trump, therefore he wished to stop a no trump contract.

Both sides were vulnerable, and generally to overcall, when vulnerable, you are required to hold a five-card suit and about two and one-half high card tricks. Here he was with only one and one-half tricks and a four-card biddable suit.

It is true he might be subjected to severe penalty to overcall, but as he could overcall the West hand with a bid of only one, and his hand was so weak, he put in a bid of one spade. If doubled, he could get out in hearts.

East bid two diamonds—this is a strength-showing bid as it is a new suit, and made freely over an adversary's call. South passed and West bid three no trump. Mr. Karn then passed. East showed a powerful hand by bidding five diamonds, but Mr. Karn's bid of one spade vulnerable had done its damage.

West, who had bid three no trump on his four small spades, was now afraid of losing at least two spade tricks and let the contract die at five diamonds. Of course, the small slam was easily made.

It was surprising to note, after looking over the scores of the 14 tables which played the same tray, that not another vulnerable North player in the room put in the overcall of one spade.

Mr Karn, in explaining the hand later, said he realized that West was not going to play the hand in clubs—that they were going to find a better declaration—and, in his opinion, he thought no trump would give them top on the board.

If he could get in a cheap lead-directing bid, or a bid that might prevent them from arriving at a no trump contract, he would receive a good score on the board. At every other table in the room a small slam was arrived at in either no trump or diamonds.

If the opponents had doubled one spade, Mr. Karn would have bid two hearts, which would also have been doubled, but the hand can be played so as to go down only three tricks doubled for a minus score of 900, which would still be a very fine result on the board.

Proper timing of bids of this kind is what counts, and one must be careful not to use them too often.

LOCAL WEDDINGS

LANDOLT-CHONG

St. John's Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, when Miss Doris Mae Peter Chong, daughter of Mrs. Peter Chong of Sydney, Australia, and of the late Mr. Peter Chong, became the bride of Mr. Henry Richard Landolt, son of Mr. John Landolt and the late Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Landolt, of Hongkong.

The Rev. N. V. Halward, M. A., M.C., officiated.

Entering the Church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Andrew W. Ho, by whom she was given away, the bride wore a dress of white satin charmeuse with chantilly lace coatee and train, the latter being trimmed with orange blossoms finished off with lovers' knots in silver. The bridal veil, heavily embossed, was held in place with orange blossoms. White gladioli and maiden hair fern made up the bride's bouquet.

A large number of friends of both bride and bridegroom attended the reception which was subsequently held at Lane Crawford's Restaurant. Later Mr. and Mrs. Landolt left for Canton and Macao where the honeymoon is being spent. The bride's going away dress was of powder blue Burmese crepe with hat and shoes to tone.

BOYES—DA SILVA.

Mr. John Lewis Boyes, a Chinese Maritime Customs officer and son of Mr. John Lewis Boyes and the late Mrs. Boyes of Essex, London, was married on Saturday afternoon at St. Joseph's Church to Miss Lucilla Victoria da Silva, the daughter of Mrs. Constancia Maria Gomes da Silva and the late Mr. L. L. da Silva. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Father Antonio Riganti.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. L. M. Gomes, was attired in white plain silk satin with long puff sleeves and a bunch of orange blossoms at the waist. She wore a diamante head dress and a veil of Brussels net with orange blossoms dropped at the side. Her bouquet was of Adam's lilies.

TRACING GANG OF THIEVES

POLICE ANTICIPATE DEVELOPMENTS

The possibility of tracing a gang responsible for the recent thefts of radiator caps from motor cars was hinted at by Detective-Inspector Elston before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, when he charged Mak Sing, unemployed, with the unlawful possession of a dome shaped plated radiator cap, fitted with two wings.

Applying for 48 hours remand, Insp. Elston remarked that cap was rather an expensive one, and was probably stolen from the Yaumati district. He wanted to go into the case carefully to see whether defendant was a member of a gang.

Accused was accordingly remanded.
